WHITE "KING," AND HIS BRIDE
Exclusive Central Press Dispatc.
To Gazette

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 1.—
In a few months, there will be rejoicing among the 1,400 dusky natives of Pari Island in the South Seas.

Ray Dean, only white man ever to live there, will return to the little-known kingdom, taking with him his pretty bride to be temporal queen.

Dean visited the island in 1923.
He was the first white man to land
there in twenty-one years. Jack London, the author, having stopped
there for a brief time in 1902.

Since the natives regarded white men as superior to gods, great ceremony followed Dean's arrival.
The chiefs persuaded him to remain there a year, during which he was the ruler of the community.

He returned to the United States to be married and now announces that he and his bride will depart
early next year to visit Pari.

Pari is in the Society group of islands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—
William Schomburg, an insurance broker, abruptly ended a pleasant hour's talk with an old friend early today, walked to the bathroom and called back:

"So long, Jerry; I'm going to end my trouble."

With that, he closed the door.
A moment later, guests in the twenty-two story apartment hotel on West End Ave., were startled by the sound of a crash on the extension roof of the restaurant.

Jerome Bacharach, the friend, rushed into the bathroom and looked out of the window from which Schomburg had dropped fifteen stories.
Schomburg was picked up dead.

DUBLIN, Nov. 1.—Following close on the loss of life and havoc wrought by gales along the coast of Ireland during the week-end, British meteorological officials today issued further gale warnings. The wind is expected to become "strong to gales" in all directions.

Toll of the week-end gales has been placed at forty-five drowned.
At Innisboffin it was reported that Patrick Concanon, owner of a fishing smack, fought the storm for seven hours. When he finally reached shore, sailors found him blind from his terrific experience.
His hands were frozen to twice their normal size. His face was puffed and his clothes were torn.
Some hours later he regained his sight.

GRAF HEADS STATE VARSITY "O" BODY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 1.—C. J.
Graf, Columbus, today assumed the duties of president of Ohio State University Varsity Association, succeeding Arthur W. Raymond, who resigned last week after announcing that he did not agree with the Association's neutral stand in regard to Ohio State's football showing this year. Graf was elected Monday night. He had been vice-president under Raymond, and was team fullback in 1912-13, and fullback and captain in 1914. Ray Stims, track team member in 1912-13, was elected vice-president succeeding Graf.

Coch Jack Wilce, did not attend
the meeting, it was reported.

MANUFACTURERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Ruth And George Resting Up

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Ruth Elder and George Haldeman today prepared to spend a quiet day catching up on their correspondence and sightseeing while Paris postponed official ceremonies during the three-day religious holiday.

Both fliers expressed their joy at being afforded an opportunity for rest from official functions, but their rest is being snatched precariously from crowds of photographers, reporters and autograph seekers who besiege them at every turn.

Yesterday they succeeded in going unharmed to and from their hotel only by using freight elevators and back doors. They spent the day sightseeing along the banks of the Seine, stopping at book stalls and watching artists

paint in the highest little square in Montmartre.

Ruth and Haldeman broadcast through the government station in the Eiffel Tower and thanked the French people for the fine reception accorded them in Paris.

The afternoon was spent shopping, with Haldeman doing most of it. He bought two suits, one gray and one mauve colored, and a number of shirts.

Speaking of her first visit of the night life of Montmartre, Ruth said:

"I went to a night club the other night and just danced twice, once with George and once with Capt.
Turner. It is interesting, but not as a steady diet. I like my clothes—simple."

OPPOSE MELLON TAX CUT

PARTY LEADERS ARE MAKING TARGET OF NEW TAX PROPOSALS

Opposition Coming From Both Sides Of Party Fence

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—
Both Republican and Democratic members of congress began to "shoot holes" in the new Mellon plan of tax reduction today, with indications that the treasury secretary's proposals will be materially modified in the new tax bill.

Much opposition was voiced to the secretary's demand that not more than $225,000,000 be lopped off the nation's tax bill in order to avoid a deficit. Democratic leaders flatly refused to accept the treasury's estimate of the future
surplus as accurate.

Secretary Mellon's advice to congress to retain the automobile and "nuisance" taxes, his proposed repeal of the inheritance tax and his limitation of a reduction in the corporation tax to 1-1/2 per cent all were criticized. A wide-spread demand for repeal of the auto and excise taxes was disclosed in today's discussion.

With the treasury's plan revealed to the house ways and means committee, these important differences stood out today:

1.—Rep. Garner (D) of Texas, leader of the minority tax forces in the house, announced adherence to his plan for a $400,000,000 tax cut. He declared that next year's surplus would exceed the treasury's estimate by more than $100,000,000, and that the treasury had underestimated the surplus a total of $79,000,000 in five years.

2.—The treasury insists upon applying the tax cut to incomes of the present year, while Democratic leaders would make the reduction effective on incomes of 1928.

3.—Insistent demands were made both by Republicans and Democrats for the repeal of war taxes and placing the country on a peacetime basis of taxation.

4.—Diverse opinion was expressed over the Mellon proposal to cut surpluses on individual incomes from $7,000 to $70,000, while his proposal to tax corporations earning less than $25,000 a year on the lower partnership basis was generally accepted.

5.—Rep. Garner announced that he would urge discussion of a new plan to tax undivided surpluses held by big corporations controlled by a single family of a few people.

6.—Sen. Jones (D) of New Mexico proposed to establish a graduating system of corporation income tax similar to the individual income tax system, a plan opposed by the treasury.

Republican leaders were plainly disappointed at the treasury's limitation on tax reduction, and Sen.
Smoot (R) of Utah, chairman of the senate finance committee, indicated a belief that the final cut will be over $200,000,000.

DEATH REPORT WAS EXAGGERATED

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—When Mrs. Walter Heineman of this city, failed to hear from her father, Thos. McCarty, of Buffalo, N. Y. for more than a month, she communicated with Mc-Carty's former employer, who replied that McCarty had been dead for several weeks.

Mrs. Heineman almost hysterical, made a hurried trip to Buffalo.

Returning home last night,
she surprised friends and relatives
by bringing McCarty with her—alive and well.

The employer had mistaken
another Thomas McCarty of the same age and description, who died in Buffalo several weeks ago, as Mrs. Heineman's parent.

SIX KILLED

MADRID, Nov. 1.—Six persons were dead and twenty were in hospitals seriously injured following a fire which occurred in a factory in the village of Arcediano, province of Salamanca. The blaze was caused by a short circuit in an electric lighting cable.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Train-men today will file with all railroads west of the Mississippi a request for an increase of approximately $1 per day, or about 19 per cent over the present wage scale, according to an announcement of President N. G.
Lee.

Lee stated that the request was a renewal of a similar demand made about one year ago which was refused by the roads and went to arbitration. The arbitration board also refused the request, excepting inasmuch as the demand affected yardmen, who were granted a 7-1/2 per cent raise.

The present agreement between the railroads and train-men expires March 1, 1928.

ENTERS NOT GUILTY PLEA WHEN CHARGED WITH HOLD-UP HERE

Roy Bartlett Under Careful Guard—Hearing
Wednesday

Roy Bartlett, Clarksburg, W. Va., identified as being implicated in the hold-up at The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. branch store, Main and West Sts., October 22, pleaded not guilty to a charge of robbery before Mayor John W.
Prugh Tuesday morning.

His hearing is set for Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. Bartlett, who did not request that he be admitted to bond, is expected to be bound over to the grand jury. He is being held at Police Headquarters.

E. H. Sayre, 26, also of Clarksburg, companion of Bartlett, also held as a suspect, was held to the grand jury last week on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, police disclosed. He waived examination when arraigned before Mayor Prugh and is being held in default of $1,000 bond.

Records show both men served penitentiary terms in West Virginia and were only recently released.

Police say Bartlett served a term of six years at Moundsville, W. Va., for shooting a man and that while confined in a county jail, attacked the sheriff and made his escape with six other prisoners. All were re-captured a short time later.

Police expect to maintain a close guard over Bartlett.

PREDICT CRISIS IN COLORADO COAL STRIKE SITUATION SOON

DENVER, Nov. 1.—The crisis of Colorado's coal strike was predicted for today. With the period of grace granted by Gov. William H.
Adams to the I. W. W. to stop all picketing ending at six o'clock this morning, it is feared that the government will be forced to use the national guard in enforcing this order.

Although I. W. W. leaders have promised to attempt to persuade their men to stop picketing, they pointed out their wishes might not be heeded.

Mine operators declared if picketing is stopped, they will have nearly their full force of miners at work by nightfall.

marital troubles and that the sailor did the actual killing. Moity alleged the women were not properly caring for their children and were receiving attention from other men.

FRENCH WILL PAY RANSOM FOR RELEASE OF RIFF PRISONERS

Will Give Tribesmen $80,000 And Seven Sets Of Harness—Other Demands Made By Riffs
To Get Ransom

TANGIER, Morocco, Nov. 1.—
The French government official designated to negotiate with the Riff tribesmen for the release of two Frenchmen and two women recently kidnapped is enroute today for Ksiba, where the $80,000 ransom demanded by the tribesmen is to be paid. Among the other demands by the Moors was one for seven elaborate sets of harness.

Finished in Moroccan style, for the chief's horses.

Additional conditions were that the French liberate ten Riff prisoners; that the French, within the next four years, redeem any counterfeit money that might be included in the ransom; that no military reprisals be made and that the sheik of the tribe receive a gift of ten dress gowns with elaborately trimmed robes for state and festal occasions.

The prisoners are Yves Steeg and Jean Maillet, nephews of the French governor general of Morocco; Baroness Teinheil and Mme.
Marie Prokoff. They were seized near the Atlas mountains while on a hunting trip ten days ago.

COBB WILL RESIGN JOB WITH ATHLETICS

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 1.—Ty Cobb was to leave for Philadelphia
this afternoon to tender his formal resignation to Connie Mack, boss of the Athletics. After twenty-three years of service in the American League Cobb has decided to hang up his spiked shoes for good.

Cobb's informal announcement of his retirement was made here yesterday. Official announcement, however, must come from the office of Connie Mack.

STEPSON OF EX- KAISER IS DEAD

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Prince George Wilhelm, second son of Princess Hermine and stepson of the former Kaiser, died today at the family home, Saabro Castle, in Silesia, as the result of injuries received when his motor cycle collided with a farm wagon.

Princess Hermine, who is now
the wife of the ex-Kaiser is enroute to Saabro Castle, which, since its owner's second marriage, has been known as Castle Kaiserin. The young prince suffered a fracture of skull. An operation was performed and he seemed to be mending, but failed to rally from a sinking spell
this morning. The youth recently visited his stepfather at Doorn.

SUGGESTS FIVE-YEAR "TERM MARRIAGE"

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.—A five-year-term marriage, mutually renewable, or voidable at the end of the period by either husband or wife, was suggested today by Charles S. Burnell, presiding judge of the Los Angeles Superior Court, as a substitute to the present civil contract of marriage.

The "term marriage" plan of Judge Burnell is not radically different from the schemes suggested by Havelock Ellis, Jacob Wasserman, Judge Lindsey, George Bernard Shaw and other thinkers of world prominence in the field of sociology, but Judge Burnell departs from the common point held

PROMISE INCREASE IN ADVERTISING IN 1928 SAYS SPEAKER

Election Will Not Hinder Business Says Executive.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.— American manufacturers "are looking to 1928 with confidence" and are planning to increase their advertising expenditures over 1927, S. E.
Conybeare, president of the Association of National Advertisers, said in an interview today. He is here attending the eighth annual convention of the association.

"We think 1928 will be a good business year in spite of the presidential campaign," said Conybeare. "The idea that business slumps during a presidential year is a fallacy."

"Our organization is representative of all the great manufacturers of the country. Our member companies do an annual gross business of more than $5,000,000,000 and, naturally, we keep in close touch with the business situation."

"I think we get a pretty accurate line on the future—as good as anyone. You see, advertising investments (expenditures) are mapped out several months in advance. We recently asked our membership in a questionnaire what they planned to do next year."

"Thirty per cent replied that they will make substantial increases in their investment in newspaper, magazine and outdoor advertising space in 1928. Several of these companies will raise their appropriation as high as 25 per cent."

"Only four per cent reported that their advertising expenditures would be smaller than in 1927.
Ninety-three per cent of our companies will keep their appropriations at the 1927 level or increase them."

"The manufacturers of the country
'know that advertising pays,' Conybeare declared. It is no longer an experiment."

Never before in history have business men been able to get in quick touch with the consumer as today, he asserted.

"It's an absorbing business, this present day advertising to the public," he said. "The manufacturer of a new product or device used by millions of people can reach them quickly through the agencies of the newspapers, the magazines, the radio, the movies, by telephoto and in other ways."

"The manufacturer can tell his story to the people almost instantaneously and in a comparatively few months create a market that years ago required months—even years—
of painstaking effort."

"This rapid introduction of articles has increased public consumption and has been a big factor in maintaining business on a high level. Advertising today is news, and the people are watching for this news, and responding as never before. It certainly keeps the manufacturer on his toes and it is fatal to be old-fashioned or non-progressive."

Business men are beginning to budget their sales and advertising costs on the basis of local trading areas, Conybeare said. They are doing this so they can determine what regions are profitable and thus "take the guess work out of advertising." It means, according to Conybeare, "better control of selling and more economy."

He also said that the business men are interested in the plans of the United States commerce department to offer the manufacturers data on trading areas so that the business men can plan their advertising campaigns on known market facts.

FOURTEEN HURT IN COLLISION OF CARS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Nov. 1.—
Running down the grade of Boylston St., early today, an elevated trolley car tore into a Boston and Worcester car, injuring fourteen persons, six so badly that they were taken to a hospital. A signal light at the scene of the crash had been giving trouble, railway officials stated.

UNAPPRECIATED

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Because he disturbed the slumbers of Harold M. Stanton, automobile man, a homeless beagle hound is now the property of a rendering corporation. Just after Stanton retired after a hard day's labor, the hound began to serenade the moon. Entreates, shoes, shouts, failed to disturb the soloist. When Stanton had counted thousands of sheep in his efforts to continue his disturbed slumbers he called the police.
They escorted the musical hound
from the darkness of the apartment yard to the rendering factory.

GOVERNMENT OFFERS

"GRAVE" CHARGES TO OIL RESERVE JURIST

Judge Retires To Consider Accusing Affidavits—Mistrial May Be Declared By Court—Hearing Of Charges Is Secret.

(BULLETIN)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—With a federal grand jury investigating charges of jury tampering, Federal Judge Frederick L. Siddons this afternoon adjourned the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial until tomorrow morning, when he is expected to render a decision concerning continuance of the trial.

Charges were presented to the judge at a secret session
this morning attended by the opposing attorneys of the two defendants, Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair.

The court's action in adjourning until tomorrow came as a surprise. It had been predicted that the afternoon session would be declared a mistrial because of the avalanche of ugly rumors that rolled about the court. Four affidavits were presented the court.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The trial of ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil magnate, on charges of fraud and conspiracy in the leasing of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, was halted by Justice Frederick L. Siddons today to afford the court an opportunity to investigate grave charges of jury irregularity made by government counsel.

While the jury remained locked up in the jury room, Justice Siddons, retired to his private chambers to hear charges "of grave concern" affecting the progress of the conspiracy trial.

These charges in the form of affidavits were presented to the court by the federal prosecutors as a result of a three day investigation by Assistant District Attorney Neil Burkinshaw.

Atlee J. Pomerene, government counsel, arose as soon as court convened and said he wanted to submit a "matter of grave concern" to the court "in the form of affidavits."

Siddons asked Pomerene whether he wanted both jury and public excluded.

"It ought not to be presented in the presence of the jury," said Pomerene gravely.

"I might take a recess then and the matter could be presented to me in chambers in the presence of opposing counsel," the court ruled.

A recess was taken, and the jury filed out while Judge Siddons and opposing counsel went to the judge's chambers where the charges were to be presented in secret session.

The courtroom was jammed to suffocation and long lines of people stood outside trying to get in for what was expected to be a sensational ending to the famous trial.
The opinion was universal that the court would declare a mistrial after hearing the government's charges.

Shortly after the lawyers had returned to the judge's chambers, Sinclair, escorted by members of his counsel, joined the conference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The Washington Herald today printed
the following:
"The Washington Herald has obtained evidence, fully substantiated

by the district attorneys office, which is expected to lead to the dismissal of the jury and the declaration of a mistrial in the Teapot oil lease conspiracy."

"Affidavits are to be laid before Justice Frederick L. Siddons, of the District Supreme Court, this morning which undoubtedly will cause
the present case to be thrown out of court to prevent a possible miscarriage of justice."

"So conclusive was the evidence furnished the government by the Herald that it appeared last night
there would be no alternative to the dismissal of the present jury and the retrial of the case before a new panel."

"Attorneys defending Albert B.
Fall, former secretary of the interior, and Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil magnate, accused of conspiracy to defraud the United States, apparently were unaware of the sensational move planned by the government."

The Herald did not disclose the nature of the evidence to be laid before the court, but the intimation was strong that it concerned jury tampering.

Assistant United Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, attached to the office of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, has been conducting an investigation into the case since last Friday night, it was learned.

The trial of the ex-cabinet officer and the millionaire oil magnate has been in progress for more than three weeks, and the government has almost concluded its presentation of the case. The defense was due to begin its evidence this week, with the exception that it would take another two weeks to conclude.

The jury in the famous case,
drawn after considerable difficulty,
has not been locked up as was the case with the Fall-Sinclair jury
some months ago. The ten men and two women that comprise the present jury have been allowed to go to their homes each night at the conclusion of the day's hearing.

If a mistrial is declared it will represent a serious setback for the government in its efforts to convict the two men of conspiracy. A great deal of time and a great deal of money have been expended in the present case. Witnesses have been brought from the furthest parts of the country, some even from Hawaii. A mistrial means all of these witnesses will have to be brought back to Washington for a new trial.

STEAMER DISASTER CLAIMED 296 LIVES

ROME, Nov. 1.—An official statement today by the Navigazione Generale Italiana, owners of the ill-fated steamer Principessa Mafalda, said 296 persons had lost their lives when the vessel sank last week off the coast of Bahia, Brazil.

Together with the statement was an indignant denial of reports circulated here that first and second class passengers had been given preference over those in the third class during the rescue work. The company termed the reports "communist," and declared that the death-list comprised 40 per cent of the cabin passengers as against only 25 per cent of those in the steage. Ten per cent of the crew lost their lives, the statement said.

COUNTY DEATH RATE AMONG HIGHEST FOR DREAD DISEASE SAID

To prepare the public for the sale of Anti-Tuberculosis Seals, from December 1 to Christmas, interesting statistics on the amount of tuberculosis found in the state have been received by the local committee.

The statistics are based on a fifteen-year average death rate from tuberculosis in Ohio, 1909-1923, by counties and cities. The death rate is based on deaths per 100,000 of population.

Only sixteen of Ohio's eighty-eight counties have an average death rate from tuberculosis higher than Greene County.

The lowest rate for counties is in Carroll, with 9.4; the mean rate, Richland with 99.9 and the highest in Hamilton County with 200.7. Greene County's average is 124.1.

Only five cities in Ohio, with seventy-nine in all, have a higher death rate from tuberculosis than the city of Xenia. They are: Iron, Jackson, Portsmouth, Cincinnati and Gallipolis. Xenia had nine deaths from the disease in 1925. There were eight deaths in the county from tuberculosis in 1926.

The lowest rate is to be found at Niles, with 56.9; the mean rate at Painesville, with 111.7 and the highest at Gallipolis with 228.9. The city of Xenia has 175.8.

WEDDING FEATURE OF KI-RO MEETING

The marriage of two prominent Xenians, will be solemnized at the joint meeting of Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, at Central High School, Tuesday evening.

Since the friends of the contracting parties are largely members of the two clubs, it was decided to bring the two organizations together for the nuptials and wives of the Kiwanians and Rotarians were also invited to attend.

Because the couple is so well known, their identity was kept a secret from their friends and their identity will not be divulged until the ceremony takes place. Refreshments will be served after the service and a reception held for the bride and bridegroom.

Twenty Years '07 - Ago - '27

Greene County breeders and exhibitors of fine cattle, hogs and sheep have more premiums to show for the past season in the show ring than any other county in the state.

Xenia ministers have endorsed the candidacy of W. F. Brennan for re-election as mayor of the city.

Mr. George Graham left for New York for a visit.

Arthur Reynolds was host at a happy little masquerade party on Halloween night at his home.

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered. — Lulu Hunt Peters.

TECHNIQUE OF THE SUNSHINE TREATMENT

"Brown as a nut" used to bring up solely the picture of a good time on a vacation, but since we know the curative effects of sunlight, the phrase has the deeper significance of improved health, as well as a good time.

As I told you yesterday, the use of the rays of the sun, either from the sunlight or from specially constructed lamps which give off the healing rays (ultra-violet) for treatment in disease, was first used in systematic manner mostly for surgical tuberculosis. This means all tuberculosis except that of the lungs. (Recently, however, that is being included, too, in certain cases.) Helio-therapy, or sunlight treatment, is now used for many other diseases besides tuberculosis, and in all of them with marked benefit. The following is a description of the method generally used for patients. They may have to be altered according to the patient and the climate, but the physician in charge will see to this. You must remember that the improvement may be very slow.

The patient reclines on his bed, the body is covered with sheets or blankets, and the head and eyes

protected. The first day the feet are exposed to the sunlight three times (at intervals of an hour) for five minutes at each exposure. On the second day the exposure is raised to ten minutes, and during the last five minutes of this period the sheets are thrown up to the knees so that the legs receive five minutes of exposure only. On the third day, five minutes more are added to the feet and legs, making fifteen and ten respectively, and the thighs are exposed for five minutes. On the fourth day, five minutes are added to the feet, legs, thighs, and the abdomen is exposed for five minutes. On the fifth day, each period is increased another five minutes and the chest receives an exposure. In this manner, the periods of exposure are increased until the entire body is being exposed. By the twelfth day the feet are exposed for one hour, legs fifty-five minutes, thighs fifty minutes, abdomen forty-five minutes, and chest forty minutes. Then the period of treatment for the feet remains at sixty minutes and other areas are gradually increased until they are all taking sixty minutes exposure. On the seventeenth day the patient is given two ninety-minute exposures instead of three sixty-minute ones.

Well or ill, get your sunlight! Sunlight every day keeps the doctor away.

Styes.

Styes are due to infections in the oil glands connected with the lashes. Anything which lowers the resistance of the tissues favors the development of the germs which cause the stye—eyestrain, prolonged exposure to strong or dusty winds, undernourishment, over-nourishment, or any disease.

Sometimes you can abort a stye by frequent massage. You've probably heard that a gold wedding ring rubbed on the stye will abort them? It isn't the ring—it's the rub that does it, if it is done.

The eye should be washed with the following eye wash. It can be used freely without any irritation:

Eye Wash (May)—Take a moderately heaped teaspoonful each of bicarbonate of soda, of borax, and of table salt, dissolve these in one quart of boiled water; add a table-spoonful of glycerine, and filter. (You can filter by pouring the solution through a cotton-stuffed funnel).

Also get a little tube of 1 per cent of yellow oxide of mercury, and rub a little of this on every night. Keep this up for a week or so after the stye is gone to prevent any of the germs which might hang over from starting up a new colony.

We have an article on Common Eye Troubles, which you may have. Send a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope with request.

Know The Truth About Senate Bill 72 Known As The Marshall

Bill

The opposition says Senate Bill No. 72 was passed to evade the Taft Decision. This is incorrect for the reason:

That this Bill was introduced February 1st; the Taft Decision was rendered March 7, 1927; that this Bill was passed to eliminate the temptation of the magistrate to convict in order to get his fees, this evil having existed for a hundred years and which the opposition criticised and now the supporters of this Bill are being criticised for trying to correct this evil.

The opposition says Senate Bill No. 72 is unconstitutional. This is absolutely incorrect for the reason:

That the Etling Law which is a companion measure of Senate Bill No. 72 provides that fines shall be paid into the County Treasury instead of into the Village and Township Treasury. Senate Bill No. 72 provides that the magistrate pay all fees into the General General Revenue Fund of the County regardless of month the magistrate draws the fees earned from the General Revenue Fund of the County regardless of whether the Defendant is convicted or acquitted.

Therefore you can see at once that the Etling Bill removes all interest the magistrate may have had in assessing a fine and Senate Bill No. 72 removes all interest the magistrate may have had in finding the Defendant guilty in order to get his fees. Therefore this Bill meets all the objections pointed out by the Taft Decision, that this Bill is in exact harmony with the Taft Decision and therefore not unconstitutional.

This view is taken by many lawyers, many judges of our Courts and many ex-judges of our courts. The following are the words of ex-Common Pleas Judge, David F. Pugh, now a prominent lawyer in the City of Columbus:

"I challenge Turner to point out a sentence, a phrase or a word of the Marshall law that requires either the mayor or justice to convict a Defendant before he can receive his fees or that makes of them a partisan judge in the sense of the Taft decision. It cannot be done. Turner has not brains enough or genius enough in his head to prove the Marshall Law is unconstitutional when subjected to the test of the Highest Court's Decision."

The question of the constitutionality of this Bill is not an issue for the reason:

That this matter cannot be settled by the people, for a Court only can declare a law constitutional or unconstitutional. This is only deception on the part of the opposition to draw people's attention from the real issue.

Decorated Furniture

Now The Vogue

That the newest vogue of decorated furniture and woodwork is meeting with popular approval among women generally is evidenced by the number of furniture and department stores displaying furniture of all kinds finished in bright, cheerful colors and designs.

Such finishes are not new, according to A. E. Foy, Jr., of The Foy Paint Company, having been used in a limited way by furniture manufacturers for years. Most furniture finished in that way was very expensive, as it was a hard matter for manufacturers to meet all color combinations to meet all tastes and to fit all interior decorative conditions.

Soon brushing lacquers made their appearance on the market and furniture manufacturers followed with novelty pieces in the unfinished wood, that could be decorated at home according to any color scheme desired.

The result obtained with these quick-drying brushing lacquers are familiar to a great many readers. The lacquer set up so quickly that it was found impossible to cover even the smallest surface without showing heavy laps and brush marks. Special thinners were required to clean brushes after painting, and in all, the experiment proved so costly that many people found it less expensive to buy such furniture already finished.

Realizing that the use of color in the home was gaining in favor very rapidly, says Foy, our laboratory started work about two years ago perfecting a lacquer-enamel that would prove satisfactory even in the hands of the most inexperienced novice. After a great deal of laboratory research and many actual tests a new Lacquer-Enamel was developed for use on both new wood and over old finishes.

Actual tests show this new lacquer-enamel to have remarkable capacity, two coats being sufficient to cover new wood or over an old dark finish. It does not set up too quickly, allowing plenty of time to flow on a smooth coat, and it is dry to use in about three hours. Drying more slowly than other preparations, there is no danger of brush marks or laps.

No special knowledge is required to finish some of the novelty furniture which can now be had at any furniture store. For most purposes the lacquer-enamel can be used just as it comes from the can, if thinning is necessary just add a little turpentine and when finished clean the brush in turpentine or ordinary gasoline.

Most up-to-date paint stores are now featuring, in addition to a complete line of unfinished novelty furniture, oil paint decalcomanias or transfers that can be applied on furniture to produce fine floral and inlaid effects.

Furniture manufacturers throughout the country are increasing production on unfinished furniture in anticipation of a large demand for such goods for Christmas sales.

SOUTH SUDBURY, Mass., Nov. 1.—The old C. O. Parmenter Grain Mill, where Henry Ford was understood to be planning to establish his town industry, was destroyed by fire early today. The adjoining lumberyard was ruined. The loss was estimated at $50,000.

Bradshaw's general store and six nearby dwelling houses were menaced but were saved by the combined efforts of local firemen aided by firemen from Marlboro, Framingham, Wayland, Sudbury, Clinton and Mr. Ford's private fire fighting force at Wayside Inn. HALLOWE'EN QUIET
HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Inclement weather served to make the "punch" out of Xenia's annual Halloween celebration Monday night.

The rainfall was not heavy and the storm abated almost as quickly as it appeared, but streets of the city were less crowded than usual on this occasion.

Few children appeared on the streets in costume and Police Chief M. E. Graham declared the Halloween observance was quiet. Police received few complaints of property destruction or depredations by juvenile celebrators.

MEXICAN BANDITS
ROUTED BY MARINES

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 1.—The bandit force of about 175 men which has been operating around Chinote has been completely dispersed as a result of the attack of United States marines on Oct. 27, in which five of the outlaws were killed, according to advices received from the scene today.

The marines were supported by native constabulary and an airplane. After three hours' fighting, the bandits fled, pursued for a short distance by the attackers. Lieut. Clarence J. Chappelle commanded the marine detachment.

Xenia Central Meets Wilmington Thursday

EIGHTEENTH SET TO FIND LOCALS WITH ONE-GAME MARGIN

Kolb's Gridders Reign Favorites In Tilt With Quakers

The Blue and White-Jerseyed gridders of Central High School came through the Withrow struggle last week in good physical condition and began preparations Monday for the annual encounter with Wilmington High at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Thursday afternoon.

Thursday's contest will be the eighteenth meeting between the two schools on the gridiron since 1911. No games were played in 1913, 1919 and 1922.

During this period Xenia has the edge in the matter of victories, having won eight games and lost seven. Two contests resulted in a tie score. The Quaker school, however, has collected more points than Xenia, scoring 217 points to 203 for Xenia.

The Blue and White, providing the same form is displayed Thursday as was exhibited in the Withrow contest, will reign a favorite to win the 1927 tussle.

Wilmington's record on the gridiron so far this season has been nothing to brag about, but the Quaker outfit points for its yearly game with Xenia and has an unhappy faculty of rising to great heights in this contest.

Wilmington's 1927 record suffers by comparison with Xenia. Central High has won two games, lost two and tied two this year, scoring fifty-nine points to opponents' sixty-two. Wilmington has played four games in the South Central League and is close to last place, having won one game, lost three and scored twenty-six points against opponents' forty-nine.

The record of Xenia-Wilmington grid meetings since 1911 follows:

1911 Xenia 16, Wilmington 3.

1912 Xenia 25, Wilmington 0.

Xenia 0, Wilmington 62.

1913 No game.

1914 Xenia 6, Wilmington 0.

Xenia 27, Wilmington 7.

1915 Xenia 20, Wilmington 20.

Xenia 0, Wilmington 21.

1917 Xenia 6, Wilmington 33.

1918 Xenia 30, Wilmington 0.

1919 No game.

1920 Xenia 7, Wilmington 20.

Xenia 7, Wilmington 7.

1921 Xenia 19, Wilmington 0.

Xenia 26, Wilmington 0.

1922 No game.

1923 Xenia 0, Wilmington 31.

1924 Xenia 0, Wilmington 6.

1925 Xenia 0, Wilmington 7.

1926 Xenia 7, Wilmington 0.

XENIAN IS WINNER OF MASQUE PRIZE

Mrs. Irma Free, Xenia, was chosen the best costumed woman and her sister, Mrs. Florence Kearney, this city, won the second woman's prize, at the Hallow'en celebration at Cedarville, Monday night. Mrs. Free was also winner of the third costume prize at the Xenia Hallow'en celebration, Saturday night, instead of Miss Freeman, as previously announced.

Several hundred revelers took part in the masquerade at Cedarville. A parade of the masqueraders was staged, and prizes awarded for various types of costumes. A dance was held in one of the lodge halls of the city, at the close of the celebration.

RED CROSS PLANS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Officers of Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, are making arrangements for the eleventh annual roll call November 11-24.

A county-wide organization is being effected and plans are being outlined to acquaint Greene County residents with the work of the Red Cross, both locally, nationally and throughout the world.

This year's Roll Call assumes exceptional interest because of the extraordinary burden placed on the Red Cross by the Mississippi flood. It met the emergency so splendidly as to deserve the gratitude of the nation. Its continuing responsibility for dealing with the after-effects of the flood gives it a special claim on America's generous support at this time.

Prominent men, in various walks of endeavor, are urging support of the 1927 Roll Call.

PROSECUTOR TALKS FOR MARSHALL BILL AT YELLOW SPRINGS

The Marshall bill, restoring power formerly held by justices of the peace, constables and village mayors, was the subject of an address by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall before an open meeting in the Yellow Springs M. E. Church Sunday night.

Prosecutor Marshall argued in favor of the bill, asserting that "it removes all interest magistrates ever have had in assessing fines and in finding defendants guilty in order to get their fees."

The speaker quoted ex-Common Pleas Judge, David F. Prugh, of Columbus, as follows:

"I challenge Attorney General Edward C. Turner to point out a sentence, phrase or word of the Marshall bill that requires either a mayor or justice of the peace to convict the defendant before he can receive his fees, or that makes them partisan judges in the sense of the Taft decision. It cannot be done."

"The Marshall bill was drawn to remedy the very defects in our law, at which, later, the Taft decision was aimed," Marshall said.

Following arguments in favor of the bill, he said: No one can know whether it will be declared constitutional or unconstitutional. It is a constitutional question. It is not settled by the people and it is not in issue before the people for a court alone can rule on its constitutionality.

"Last year," he said, "$1,200,000 was collected from bootleggers in Ohio. Defeat of the bill means more taxes to meet the loss in fines, while, on the other hand, the upholding of the bill will mean a profit to taxpayers."

Answering a charge that the bill tends to bring about unwarranted arrests, the speaker pointed out the bill "safeguards against that very thing, for it provides the magistrate cannot collect his fees until his cost bill is checked by the prosecuting attorney or attorney general; and if the prosecutors in the various counties are on the job, there can be no unwarranted arrests."

He was introduced by the Rev. T. M. Scarff, The Rev. Carl White and the Rev. Mr. Patton led the devotions opening the meeting.

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Prior to her selection for the leading role in the picture, Miss Taylor was associated with Pathe comedies as a bathing beauty. Coincident with the announcement by Paramount that it had purchased the screen rights of the Anita Loos' best seller, came the declaration from Jesse L. Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of

"SALLY'S SHOULDERS"
"THE HONEY LOU"
"THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL"
ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:
LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only child of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived far beyond their means. Lily has been reared to be thoroughly useless, and her highest ambition is realized when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a wealthy bachelor much older than herself.

On the morning after he asks her to marry him, he telephones to say he is coming to see her at five that afternoon, and Lily's mother asks him to stay for dinner. Lily begins to look ahead and to wonder what life would be like if she had to eat dinner with Staley every night for years. She likes him, and the thought of his money is more than a pleasant thought to her. But she wonders if she really loves him enough to marry him. Then MRS. LEXINGTON starts talking about the June wedding and the lace veil and the decorations, and in spite of herself, Lily thrills to the thought of a big wedding. She starts out in the rain to ask her chum, SUE CAIN, to be her maid of honor. Sue is having lunch down town, and on her way there Lily sees a very handsome, blue-eyed man looking at her. She feels herself oddly attracted toward him before she notices that he is wearing a driver's uniform and standing beside a taxicab. She starts away from him, then turns, and goes slowly back to him.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER II
Long afterwards Lily knew exactly why she turned in the street and went back to the orange-colored taxicab and its driver.

But that afternoon she had no idea why she was doing it. She simply did it—moved by some impulse that pulled her back as if she had been a marionette jerked this way and that by slender threads.

With her eyes on the driver's face, she opened the door of the cab and climbed nimbly into it. She dropped down upon the leather cushions.

"Where do you want to go, Miss?" the man asked, and instantly Lily liked the sound of his voice. It was low and deep. It was the very nicest voice she had ever heard. She felt as if she had been waiting to hear that voice for ever so long—for years and years. It soothed her, and it excited her, too. It stirred her.

She was more excited at that moment than she ever had been before in her life that had been filled with excitement of all kinds. "Where do I want to go?" she repeated. "Why—where do I want to go?"

As a matter of fact, she did not want to go anywhere, except to the Park Lane restaurant that was not 30 yards away. She had come down town to see Sue Cain, and here she was!

"I want to go home," she decided. "Montpelier road. You know where it is?" It was far out beyond the city limits, and Lily was grateful for the long ride ahead of her.

The cab jerked and started. Lily leaned back against the cushions and studied the back of the driver's head—a very well-shaven head, with its ears pressed flat against it under the stiff-visored cap.

Then suddenly she sat forward in her seat.

Just above the "jump seats" was a small pasteboard card, and upon it was the driver's photograph! Above it was this legend: "MERCURY TAXI COMPANY Owner-driver Cabs."

And below that was the signature of the driver himself—"Patrick France."

"Pat France—What a lovely name!" said Lily to herself. "Pat France!" She liked it immensely. It had such a gay, nonchalant, cheerful sound. . . . Pat France. . . . Pat.

She turned down one of the jump seats and pushed open the window behind the driver. If he heard her or saw her, he gave no sign. He looked straight ahead of him at the wet street, crowded with automobiles and people and street cars. "Your car skids on a day like this doesn't it?" she asked presently. "Yes," he did not turn his head. "I drive my father's car a great deal—and I hate to be out in weather like this," Lily said, after a long pause.

No answer. "I should think it would be an exciting life—driving a taxicab," was the next thing she said, her eyes on the man's face. "What a nice nose he has," she was thinking, as she spoke. She liked the firm way his lips came together, too, and the way his black brows jutted out a little over those blue eyes.

If taxidiving was an exciting life, Patrick France did not say so. He smiled in an indifferent sort of way on the man's face. "I suppose he's used to girls doing this thing that I'm doing," thought Lily. "He's good looking, and women always talk to good-looking cab drivers and policemen in all probability."

She closed the window, and went back to the corner of back seat. Her eyes dropped once more to the photograph of Pat France, behind its isinglass shield.

What a nice, clever look he had, she thought, leaning forward to study it more closely. Straight, honest eyes, a wide, humorous mouth, and the kind of nose that belongs to a man who does things.

Then she noticed how white his collar was above the khaki-colored coat, and how clean his big hands were as they lay on the steering wheel. He certainly was more than good to look at.

Suddenly the car jerked, spluttered, and came to a slow sliding stop in the wide, wet street they were passing through. The driver leaned forward, listening intently to the despairing sound it made as it came to a halt. Then he jumped out and threw up the orange-colored hood, all glistening and spotted with the rain. He began to fuss with the motor, his lips puckered up in a cheerful whistle.

Presently he stopped whistling and began to hum the tune of the "Cherie," waltz which happened to be popular everywhere at that time.

After a minute or two he slammed down the hood, wiped his hands on a spotless handkerchief, and jumped back into the taxicab. It started at once.

Lily moved over to the "jump seat" once more. "Well, you certainly are a good driver," she said.

She was more excited at that moment than she ever had been before in her life that had been filled with excitement of all kinds.

"Where do I want to go?" she repeated. "Why—where do I want to go?"

As a matter of fact, she did not want to go anywhere, except to the Park Lane restaurant that was not 30 yards away.

Lily moved over to the "jump seat" once more. "Well, you cer-

France" and his photograph upon it!

She had just time to slip it into her hand bag when he opened the door and handed her the fare slip. She did not tip him, as she certainly would have tipped any other cab driver in Christendom. She had a feeling, somehow, that he wouldn't take a tip from a woman.

And when the orange-colored cab backed out of the drive and started back to town, she stood watching it from the top of the stone steps and wrote its number—"15"—on a page in her little gold-leafed address book.

Later that afternoon Staley Drummond came to see his bride-to-be.

In his eagerness he came at four instead of five, and he came bearing gifts. He brought Lily a box of white orchids, delicately marked with color. He brought her a five-pound box of candy and glazed fruits. He brought her five new novels, and a box of silk-tipped cigarettes.

Mrs. Lexington met him in the hall and gave him a motherly kiss, although she couldn't have been more than 10 years older than he. "There's no one Cyrus and I would rather welcome into our family than you, Staley," she said warmly—so warmly that if Lily's welcome was a little cold he did not notice it.

She came downstairs, pale and bright-eyed in a black satin dress that was a perfect background for Staley's white orchid. But after dinner she took them off and put them in a bowl of water. They were too lovely to wear, she said.

"They made me think of you when I bought them," Staley said, holding her in his arms and kissing her tenderly as if she were some frail bit of statuary that would break in his arms if he held her too tight or kissed her too hard.

They sat down on the big deep couch before the fire and he held her hand—the hand that wore his ring like a glistening tear-drop in both of his. He told her how she had made every dream of women that he had ever had come true.

Lily nodded without enthusiasm. Somehow or other, it didn't sound so alluring—sitting before the fire in Staley's big beautiful house—with only Staley for company. Staley belonged in a crowd, laughing and talking, cracking jokes, lighting cigarettes, playing cards, dancing as no other man could dance.

"What's the matter with you tonight? You don't seem happy," he said to her now. "Are you sorry you've promised you'll marry me in June? Is that what's wrong?"

of his nose with one playful finger. "Silly Silly!"

He took her in his arms again and looked straight at her. "You do care for me, don't you, Lily?" She laughed again, but this time she didn't meet his eyes. "I've been wanting you to ask me to marry you for months and months," she said.

That was the truth, at any rate. She had wanted him to—just as prayerfully as her mother had waited him to.

She had wanted to be Mrs. Staley Drummond. She still wanted to be!

But as she sat there, with his arms around her, looking up at him from under her thick, curving lashes, she was thinking about a cab driver who was working on some kind of an invention for automobiles.

And, as if in answer to that thought, the door of the living room opened and Mrs. Lexington called to her from the threshold. "Lily, there's a cab driver out here on the porch. He says he must see you about something," she said. "I can't get rid of him."

BRIDE TO SERVE AS "QUEEN"

To Accompany Husband To Paris Island "Throne"

RAY DEAN, PARI ISLANDS WHITE "KING" AND HIS BRIDE Exclusive Central Press Dispatch To Gazette

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 1.—In a few months, there will be rejoicing among the 1,400 dusky natives of Pari Island in the South Seas.

Ray Dean, only white man ever to live there, will return to the little-known kingdom, taking with him his pretty bride to be temporal queen.

Dean visited the island in 1923. He was the first white man to land there in twenty-one years, Jack London, the author, having stopped there for a brief time in 1902.

Since the natives regarded white men as superior to gods, great ceremony followed Dean's arrival.

The chiefs persuaded him to remain there a year, during which he was the ruler of the community.

He returned to the United States to be married and now announces that he and his bride will depart early next year to visit Pari.

Pari is in the Society group of islands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—William Schomburg, an insurance broker, abruptly ended a pleasant hour's talk with an old friend early today, walked to the bathroom and called back:

"So long, Jerry; I'm going to end my trouble."

With that, he closed the door. A moment later, guests in the twenty-two story apartment hotel on West End Ave., were startled by the sound of a crash on the extension roof of the restaurant.

Jerome Bacharach, the friend, rushed into the bathroom and looked out of the window from which Schomburg had dropped fifteen stories. Schomburg was picked up dead.

FALL STORM TOLL IN IRELAND IS 45

DUBLIN, Nov. 1.—Following close on the loss of life and havoc wrought by gales along the coast of Ireland during the week-end, British meteorological officials today issued further gale warnings. The wind is expected to become "strong to gales" in all directions.

Toll of the week-end gales has been placed at forty-five drowned. At Inishboffin it was reported that Patrick Concannon, owner of a fishing smack, fought the storm for seven hours. When he finally reached shore, sailors found him blind from his terrific experience. His hands were frozen in twice their normal size. His face was puffed and his clothes were torn. Some hours later he regained his sight.

GRAF HEADS STATE VARSITY "O" BODY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 1.—C. J. Graf, Columbus, today assumed the duties of president of Ohio State University Varsity Association, succeeding Arthur W. Raymond who resigned last week after announcing that he did not agree with the Association's neutral stand in regard to Ohio State's football showing this year. Graf was elected Monday night. He had been vice-president under Raymond, and was team fullback and captain in 1914. Ray Sims, track team member in 1912-13-14 was elected vice-president succeeding Graf.

Coch Jack Wilce, did not attend the meeting, it was reported.

MANUFACTURERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Ruth And George Resting Up

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Ruth Elder and George Haldeman today prepared to spend a quiet day catching up on their correspondence and sight-seeing while Paris postponed official ceremonies during the three-day religious holiday.

Both flirts expressed their joy at being afforded an opportunity for rest from official functions, but their rest is being snatched precariously from crowds of photographers, reporters and autograph seekers who besiege them at every turn.

Yesterday they succeeded in going unharmed to and from their hotel only by using freight elevators and back doors. They spent the day sightseeing along the banks of the Seine, stopping at book stalls and watching artists paint in the highest little square in Montmartre.

Ruth and Haldeman broadcast through the government station in the Eiffel Tower and thanked the French people for the fine reception accorded them in Paris.

The afternoon was spent shopping, with Haldeman doing most of it. He bought two suits, one gray and one mauve colored, and a number of shirts.

Speaking of her first visit of the night life of Montmartre, Ruth said:

"I went to a night club the other night and just danced twice, once with George and once with Capt. Turner. It is interesting, but not as a steady diet. I like my recreation as I like my clothes—simple."

PROMISE INCREASE IN ADVERTISING IN 1928 SAYS SPEAKER

Election Will Not Hinder Business Says Executive.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—American manufacturers "are looking to 1928 with confidence" and are planning to increase their advertising expenditures over 1927, S. E. Conybears, president of the Association of National Advertisers, said in an interview today. He is here attending the eighth annual convention of the association.

"We think 1928 will be a good business year in spite of the presidential campaign," said Conybears. "The idea that business slumps during a presidential year is a fallacy."

"Our organization is representative of all the great manufacturers of the country. Our member companies do an annual gross business of more than $5,000,000,000 and, naturally, we keep in close touch with the business situation."

"I think we get a pretty accurate line on the future—as good as anyone. You see, advertising investments (expenditures) are mapped out several months in advance. We recently asked our membership in a questionnaire what they planned to do next year."

"Thirty per cent replied that they will make substantial increases in their investment in newspaper, magazine and outdoor advertising space in 1928. Several of these companies will raise their appropriation as high as 25 per cent."

"Only four per cent reported that their advertising expenditures would be smaller than in 1927. Ninety-three per cent of our companies will keep their appropriations at the 1927 level or increase them."

The manufacturers of the country "know that advertising pays," Conybears declared. It is no longer an experiment.

Never before in history have business men been able to get in quick touch with the consumer as today, he asserted.

"It is an absorbing business, this present day advertising to the public," he said. "The manufacturer of a new product or device used by millions of people can reach them quickly through the agencies of the newspapers, the magazines, the radio, the movies, by telephone and in other ways."

"The manufacturer can tell his story to the people almost instantly and in a comparatively few months create a market that years ago required months—even years—of painstaking effort."

"This rapid introduction of articles has increased public consumption and has been a big factor in maintaining business on a high level. Advertising today is news, and the people are watching for this news, and responding as never before. It certainly keeps the manufacturer on his toes and it is fatal to be old-fashioned or non-progressive."

Business men are beginning to budget their sales and advertising costs on the basis of local trading areas, Conybears said. They are doing this so they can determine what regions are profitable and thus "take the guess work out of advertising." It means, according to Conybears, "better control of selling and more economy." He also said that the business men are interested in the plans of the United States commerce department to offer the manufacturers data on trading areas so that the business men can plan their advertising campaigns on known market facts.

Judge Retires To Consider Accusing Affidavits—Mistrial May Be Declared By Court—Hearing Of Charges Is Secret.

(BULLETIN)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—With a federal grand jury investigating charges of jury tampering, Federal Judge Frederick L. Siddons this afternoon adjourned the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial until tomorrow morning, when he is expected to render a decision concerning continuance of the trial.

Charges were presented to the judge at a secret session this morning attended by the opposing attorneys of the two defendants, Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair.

The court's action in adjourning until tomorrow came as a surprise. It had been predicted that the afternoon session would be declared a mistrial because of the avalanche of ugly rumors that rolled about the court. Four affidavits were presented the court.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The trial of ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil magnate, on charges of fraud and conspiracy in the leasing of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, was halted by Justice Frederick L. Siddons today to afford the court an opportunity to investigate grave charges of jury irregularity made by government counsel.

While the jury remained locked up in the jury room, Justice Siddons, retired to his private chambers to hear charges "of grave concern" affecting the progress of the conspiracy trial.

These charges in the form of affidavits were presented to the court by the federal prosecutors as a result of a three day investigation by Assistant District Attorney Neil Burkinshaw.

Atlee J. Pomerene, government counsel, arose as soon as court convened and said he wanted to submit a "matter of grave concern" to the court "in the form of affidavits."

Siddons asked Pomerene whether he wanted both jury and public excluded.

"It ought not to be presented in the presence of the jury," said Pomerene gravely.

"I might take a recess then and the matter could be presented to me in chambers in the presence of opposing counsel," the court ruled.

A recess was taken, and the jury filed out while Judge Siddons and opposing counsel went to the judge's chambers where the charges were to be presented in secret session.

The courtroom was jammed to suffocation and long lines of people stood outside trying to get in for what was expected to be a sensational ending to the famous trial. The opinion was universal that the court would declare a mistrial after hearing the government's charges.

Shortly after the lawyers had retired to the judge's chambers, Sinclair, escorted by members of his counsel, joined the conference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The Washington Herald today printed the following:

"The Washington Herald has obtained evidence, fully substantiated by the district attorneys' office, which is expected to lead to the dismissal of the jury and the declaration of a mistrial in the Teapot oil lease conspiracy."

"Affidavits are to be laid before Justice Frederick L. Siddons, of the District Supreme Court, this morning which undoubtedly will cause the present case to be thrown out of court to prevent a possible miscarriage of justice."

"So conclusive was the evidence furnished the government by the Herald that it appeared last night there would be no alternative to the dismissal of the present jury and the retrial of the case before a new panel."

"Attorneys defending Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil magnate, accused of conspiracy to defraud the United States, apparently were unaware of the sensational move planned by the government."

The Herald did not disclose the nature of the evidence to be laid before the court, but the intimation was strong that it concerned jury tampering.

Assistant United Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, attached to the office of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, has been conducting an investigation into the case since last Friday night, it was learned.

The trial of the ex-cabinet officer and the multimillionaire oil magnate has been in progress for more than three weeks, and the government has almost concluded its presentation of the case. The defense was due to begin its evidence this week, with the exception that it would take another two weeks to conclude.

The jury in the famous case, drawn after considerable difficulty, has not been locked up as was the case with the Fall-Sinclair jury some months ago. The ten men and two women that comprise the present jury have been allowed to go to their homes each night at the conclusion of the day's hearing.

If a mistrial is declared it will repeat a serious setback for the government in its efforts to convict the two men of conspiracy. A great deal of time and a great deal of money have been expended in the present case. Witnesses have been brought from the furthestmost parts of the country, some even from Hawaii. A mistrial means all of these witnesses will have to be brought back to Washington for a new trial.

The government charges Robbins with receiving a commission on car lots of alcohol, through acting as an alleged "go-between" in disposition of the contraband shipments which were diverted into bootleg channels.

A total of five persons named in the original indictment have died, the latest being Eli L. Hart, of Duluth, according to U. S. District Attorney A. E. Bernstein, who said he received word recently that Hart had succumbed to appendicitis.

UNAPPRECIATED

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Because he disturbed the slumbers of Harold M. Stanton, automobile man, a homeless beagle hound is now the property of a rendering corporation. Just after Stanton retired after a hard day's labor, the hound began to serenade the moon. Entreaties, shoes, shouts, failed to disturb the soloist. When Stanton had counted thousands of sheep in his efforts to continue his slumber, he called the police. They escorted the musical hound from the darkness of the apartment yard to the rendering factory.

STEAMER DISASTER
CLAIMED 296 LIVES

ROME, Nov. 1.—An official statement today by the Navigazione Generale Italiana, owners of the ill-fated steamer Principessa Mafalda, said 296 persons had lost their lives when the vessel sank last week off the coast of Bahia, Brazil.

Together with the statement was an indignant denial of reports circulated here that first and second class passengers had been given preference over those in the third class during the rescue work. The company termed the reports "completely untrue," and declared that the death-toll comprised 40 per cent of the cabin passengers as against only 25 per cent of those in the steerage. Ten per cent of the crew lost their lives, the statement said.

TRAINMEN TO ASK $1 RAISE

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen today will file with all railroad west of the Mississippi a request for an increase of approximately $1 per day, or about 19 per cent over the present wage scale, according to announcement of President N. G. Lee.

Lee stated that the request was a renewal of a similar demand made about one year ago which was refused by the roads and went to arbitration. The arbitration board also refused the request, excepting inasmuch as the demand affected yardmen, who were granted a 7 1/2 per cent raise.

The present agreement between the railroads and trainmen expires March 1, 1928.

ENTERS NOT GUILTY PLEA WHEN CHARGED WITH HOLD-UP HERE

Roy Bartlett Under Careful Guard—Hearing Wednesday

Roy Bartlett, Clarksburg, W. Va., identified as being implicated in the hold-up at The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. branch store, Main and West Sts., October 22, pleaded not guilty to a charge of robbery before Mayor John W. Prugh Tuesday morning.

His hearing is set for Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. Bartlett, who did not request that he be admitted to bond, is expected to be bound over to the grand jury. He is being held at Police Headquarters.

E. H. Sayre, 26, also of Clarksburg, companion of Bartlett, also held as a suspect, was held to the grand jury last week on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, police disclosed. He waived examination when arraigned before Mayor Prugh and is being held in default of $1,000 bond.

Records show both men served penitentiary terms in West Virginia and were only recently released.

Police say Bartlett served a term of six years at Moundsville, W. Va., for shooting a man and that while confined in a county jail, attacked the sheriff and made his escape with six other prisoners. All were re-captured a short time later.

Police expect to maintain a close guard over Bartlett.

PREDICT CRISIS IN COLORADO COAL STRIKE SITUATION SOON

DENVER, Nov. 1.—The crisis of Colorado's coal strike was predicted for today. With the period of grace granted by Gov. William H. Adams to the I. W. W. to stop all picketing ending at six o'clock this morning, it is feared that the government will be forced to use the national guard in enforcing this order.

Although I. W. W. leaders have promised to attempt to persuade their men to stop picketing, they pointed out their wishes might not be heeded.

Mine operators declared if picketing is stopped, they will have nearly their full force of miners at work by nightfall.

Among the other demands by the Moors was one for seven elaborate sets of harness.

STEPSON OF EX- KAISER IS DEAD

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Prince George Wilhelm, second son of Princess Hermine and stepson of the former Kaiser, died today at the family home, Sasbor Castle, in Silesia, as the result of injuries received when his motor cycle collided with a farm wagon.

Princess Hermine, who is now the wife of the ex-Kaiser is enroute to Sasbor Castle, which, since its owner's second marriage, has been known as Castle Kalsaria. The young prince suffered a fractured skull. An operation was performed and he seemed to be mending, but failed to rally from a sinking spell this morning. The youth recently visited his stepfather at Doorn.

SUGGESTS FIVE-YEAR "TERM MARRIAGE"

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.—A five-year-term marriage, mutually renewable, or voidable at the end of the period by either husband or wife, was suggested today by Charles S. Burnell, presiding judge of the Los Angeles Superior Court, as a substitute to the present civil contract of marriage.

The "term marriage" plan of Judge Burnell is not radically different from the schemes suggested by Havelock Ellis, Jacob Wasserman, Judge Lindsey, George Bernard Shaw and other thinkers of world prominence in the field of sociology, but Judge Burnell departs from the common point held by all these thinkers—that modern life and its social complications have rendered the marriage relation archaic and unfit for the use of civilized peoples.

"Term marriages" under Judge Burnell's plan would be:

1.—Contracted for a period of five years only.

2.—Renewable by mutual consent only, for a second similar period.

3.—Terminated by the desire of one party, or both.

In case children were born to the union, or property was amassed over which disputes arose, the principals would be subject to court decisions similar to the present alimony and custody hearings.

Support of the children would be fixed by statute upon an equitable basis, as well as future support of a wife or husband who should be unable to care for herself or himself after termination of the marriage.

The grounds for divorce now legal in California, desertion, failure to provide, habitual intoxication and conviction of a felony, would be abolished.

By all these thinkers—that modern life and its social complications have rendered the marriage relation archaic and unfit for the use of civilized peoples.

"Term marriages" under Judge Burnell's plan would be:

COUNTY DEATH RATE AMONG HIGHEST FOR DREAD DISEASE SAID

To prepare the public for the sale of Anti-Tuberculosis Seals, from December 1 to Christmas, interesting statistics on the amount of tuberculosis found in the state have been received by the local committee.

The statistics are based on a fifteen-year average death rate from tuberculosis in Ohio, 1909-1923, by counties and cities. The death rate is based on deaths per 100,000 of population.

Only sixteen of Ohio's eighty-eight counties have an average death rate from tuberculosis higher than Greene County.

The lowest rate for counties is in Carroll, with 94.4; the mean rate, Richland with 99.9; and the highest in Hamilton County, with 206.7. Greene County's average is 134.1.

Only five cities in Ohio, with seventy-nine in all, have a higher death rate from tuberculosis than the city of Xenia. They are: Iron- ton, Jackson, Portsmouth, Cincinnati and Gallipolis. Xenia had nine deaths from the disease in 1926. There were eight deaths in the county from tuberculosis in 1926.

The lowest rate is to be found at Niles, with 56.9; the mean rate at Palmyra, with 111.7 and the highest at Gallipolis with 228.9. The city of Xenia has 177.8.

WEDDING FEATURE OF KI-RO MEETING

The marriage of two prominent Xenians, will be solemnized at the joint meeting of Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, at Central High School, Tuesday evening.

Since the friends of the contracting parties are largely members of the two clubs, it was decided to bring the two organizations together for the nuptials and wives of the Kiwanians and Rotarians were also invited to attend.

Because the couple is so well known, their identity was kept a secret from their friends and their identity will not be divulged until the ceremony takes place. Refreshments will be served after the service and a reception held for the bride and bridegroom.

"Brown as a nut" used to bring up solely the picture of a good time on a vacation, but since we know the curative effects of sunlight, the phrase has the deeper significance of improved health, as well as a good time.

As I told you yesterday, the use of the rays of the sun, either from the sunlight or from specially constructed lamps which give off the healing rays (ultra-violet) for treatment in disease, was first used in systematic manner mostly for surgical tuberculosis. This means all tuberculosis except that of the lungs. (Recently, however, that is being included, too, in certain cases.) Hello-therapy, or sunlight treatment, is now used for many other diseases besides tuberculosis, and in all of them with marked benefit. The following is a description of the method generally used for patients. They may have to be altered according to the patient and the climate, but the physician in charge will see to this. You must remember that the improvement may be very slow.

The patient reclines on his bed, the body is covered with sheets or blankets, and the head and eyes

protected. The first day the feet are exposed to the sunlight three times (at intervals of an hour) for five minutes at each exposure. On the second day the exposure is raised to ten minutes, and during the last five minutes of this period the sheets are thrown up to the knees so that the legs receive five minutes of exposure only. On the third day, five minutes more are added to the feet and legs, making fifteen, and ten respectively, and the thighs are exposed for five minutes. On the fourth day, five minutes are added to the feet, legs, thighs, and the abdomen is exposed for five minutes. On the fifth day, each period is increased another five minutes and the chest receives an exposure. In this manner, the period of exposure is increased until the entire body is being exposed. By the twelfth day the feet are exposed for one hour, legs fifty-five minutes, thighs fifty minutes, abdomen forty-five minutes, and chest forty minutes. Then the period of treatment for the feet remains at sixty minutes and other areas are gradually increased until they are all taking sixty minutes exposure. On the seventeenth day the patient is given two ninety-minute exposures instead of three sixty-minute ones.

Well or ill, get your sunlight! Sunlight every day keeps the doctor away.

Styes.

Styes are due to infections in the oil glands connected with the eyelashes. Anything which lowers the resistance of the tissues favors the development of the germs which cause the stye—eye strain, prolonged exposure to strong or dusty winds, undernourishment, over-nourishment, or any disease.

Sometimes you can abort a stye by frequent massage. You've probably heard that a gold wedding ring rubbed on the stye will abort it. It isn't the ring—it's the rub that does it, if it is done.

The eye should be washed with the following eye wash. It can be used freely without any irritation:

Eye Wash (May)—Take a moderately heaped teaspoonful each of bicarbonate of soda, of borax, and of table salt, dissolve these in one quart of boiled water; add a tablespoonful of glycerine, and filter. (You can filter by pouring the solution through a cotton-stuffed funnel.)

Also get a little tube of 1 per cent of yellow oxide of mercury, and rub a little of this on every night. Keep this up for a week or so after the stye is gone to prevent any of the germs which might hang over from starting up a new colony.

We have an article on Common Eye Troubles, which you may have. Send a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope with request.

INGROWN NAIL

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrown nail reduces inflammation and pain and so softens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Know The Truth About Senate

Bill 72 Known As The Marshall

Bill

The opposition says Senate Bill No. 72 was passed to evade the Taft Decision. This is incorrect for the reason:

That this Bill was introduced February 1st; the Taft Decision was rendered March 7, 1927; that this Bill was passed to eliminate the temptation of the magistrate to convict in order to get his fees, this evil having existed for a hundred years and which the opposition criticised and now the supporters of this Bill are being criticised for trying to correct this evil.

The opposition says Senate Bill No. 72 is unconstitutional. This is absolutely incorrect for the reason:

That the Etling Law which is a companion measure of Senate Bill No. 72 provides that fines shall be paid into the County Treasury instead of into the Village and Township Treasury. Senate Bill No. 72 provides that the magistrate pay all fees into the General Revenue Fund of the County regardless of month the magistrate draws the fees earned from the General Revenue Fund of the County regardless of whether the Defendant is convicted or acquitted.

Therefore you can see at once that the Etling Bill removes all interest the magistrate may have had in assessing a fine and Senate Bill No. 72 removes all interest the magistrate may have had in finding the Defendant guilty in order to get his fees. Therefore this Bill meets all the objections pointed out by the Taft Decision, that this Bill is in exact harmony with the Taft Decision and therefore not unconstitutional.

This view is taken by many lawyers, many judges of our Courts and many ex-judges of our courts. The following are the words of ex-Common Pleas Judge, David F. Pugh, now a prominent lawyer in the City of Columbus:

"I challenge Turner to point out a sentence, a phrase or a word of the Marshall law that requires either the mayor or justice to convict a Defendant before he can receive his fees or that makes of them a partisan judge in the sense of the Taft decision. It cannot be done. Turner has not brains enough or genius enough in his head to prove the Marshall Law is unconstitutional when subjected to the test of the Highest Court's Decision."

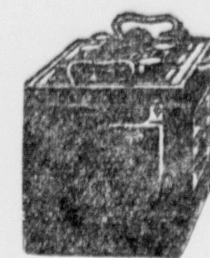

The question of the constitutionality of this Bill is not an issue for the reason:

That this matter cannot be settled by the people, for a Court only can declare a law constitutional or unconstitutional. This is only deception on the part of the opposition to draw people's attention from the real issue.

Decorated Furniture Now The Vogue

That the newest vogue of decorated furniture and woodwork is meeting with popular approval among women generally, is evidenced by the number of furniture and department stores displaying furniture of all kinds finished in bright, cheerful colors and designs. Such finishes are not new. According to A. E. Foy, Jr., of the Foy Paint Company, having been used in a limited way by furniture manufacturers for years. Most furniture finished in that way was very expensive, as it was a hard matter for manufacturers to work out color combinations to meet all tastes and to fit all interior decorating conditions.

Soon brushing lacquers made their appearance on the market and furniture manufacturers followed with novelty pieces in the unfinished wood, that could be decorated at home according to any color scheme desired. The result obtained with these quick-drying brushing lacquers are familiar to a great many readers. The lacquer set up so quickly that it was found impossible to cover even the smallest surface without showing heavy laps and brush marks. Special thinners were required to clean brushes after painting, and in all, the experiment proved so costly that many people found it less expensive to buy such furniture already finished.

Realizing that the use of color in the home was gaining in favor very rapidly, says Foy, our laboratory started work about two years ago perfecting a lacquer-enamel that would prove satisfactory even in the hands of the most inexperienced novice. After a great deal of laboratory research and many actual tests a new Lacquer-Enamel was developed for use on both new wood and over old finishes.

Actual tests show this new lacquer-enamel to have remarkable capacity, two coats being sufficient to cover new wood or over an old dark finish. It does not set up too quickly, allowing plenty of time to flow on a smooth coat, and it is dry to use in about three hours. Drying more slowly than other preparations, there is no danger of brush marks or laps.

No special knowledge is required to finish some of the novelty furniture which can now be had at any furniture store. For most purposes the lacquer-enamel can be used just as it comes from the can. If thinning is necessary just thin with a little turpentine and when finished clean the brush in turpentine or ordinary gasoline.

Most up-to-date paint stores are now featuring, in addition to a complete line of unfinished novelty furniture, oil paint decalcomanias or transfers that can be applied on furniture to produce fine floral and inland effects. Furniture manufacturers throughout the country are increasing production on unfinished furniture in anticipation of a large demand for such goods for Christmas sales.

QUIET CONDUCE TO EFFICIENCY

Scientists say that the noises of a large city cost millions of dollars a year in impaired efficiency of workers.

Many of the older, more excruciating noises of civilization are being eliminated. Electric and gas welding is superseding the pneumatic riveter. Electric motors replace the noisy steam engine. Asphaltic pavements and rubber-tired vehicles give back only a fraction of the clatter of the old steel tires on granite block paving.

But the large city is still fearfully noisy. Every unnecessary noise saps nerves and destroys health and working efficiency. With ten people living where one lived two decades ago, the sum total of noises is larger today than it was in the earlier days, hence the greater necessity for noise reduction.

To escape noise is one reason for growth in the tendency to take industry to smaller towns, where quiet, and better air, and more greenery and more room and more individuality are possible. All these are definite, bankable assets for any industry.

Electricity, gas and sound-muffling asphalt on streets are three of the most potent noise reducers, and work as ideally under rural conditions as in the city; with them industry in the smaller community can be almost noiseless and nerveless and 100 per cent efficient.

LEARNING SOMETHING NEW

Dwight Morrow, newly appointed ambassador to Mexico, has an instructor come to his office an hour a day for a lesson in Spanish. He is well past 50 year old, but he is willing to become a student for the sake of doing his job right. How many of us are willing to take equal pains?

Most of us get new jobs from time to time, but many people would not prepare themselves for such new opportunities in any way. They would just turn up at the new place at the appointed hour and ask what was to be done. Or if they are working right along on some steady job, it does not occur to them to study authorities on the subject and try to learn how to do it better.

Many cities worry about their bad boys, while there are some that give their boys so many good things to do that they don't have time to become bad ones.

The Way of the World

VOTING IS TRYING

If a man fails to vote in the South American republic of Uruguay he may be fined or even thrown into jail. That makes a citizen take his citizenship seriously. It's a sad slant on human intelligence that men have to be forced to vote. If men and women have the slightest idea of what life and living are all about, they will never let anything but death keep them from voting. For in the ballot lies their hope of governing themselves wisely. They can govern themselves wisely unless they try. And voting means trying.

PHOTONS

Ever hear of a photon? A photon is a corpuscle of radiant energy. It might be called a new type of atom. Dean Lewis, of the chemistry department of the University of California, is developing the theory that radiant energy does not travel in waves, but that light and heat are carried by corpuscles which shoot out from the body which has held them.

Always we are on the verge of great discoveries. Nothing is too big or too new to get into a mind which is properly open. Perhaps day after tomorrow's children will know as much about photons as the American people today know about baseball. What a world that will be then?

COMMUNISM

H. G. Wells, in one of his later books, calls communism the "sabotage of civilization by the disappointed." There is nothing like actual experience to prove the value or the worthlessness of a theory or a practice. At first communism, given trial in Russia, was an interesting experiment. The world is a better, sounder place today because communism was given a trial. Now we know that it is not a good form of government. By experiment a lot of even interesting theorizing is made unnecessary.

A LONG HOP

Nebraska army officer, seized with an attack of appendicitis, piloted his airplane 500 miles to a hospital where he underwent a hurried operation. That's a long step, or a long fly, from the horse and buggy days, and the doctor who whipped his horses through the mud.

WORTH HEARING

When you are wondering what you are going to do tonight, look over the paper and see if anybody is going to lecture on a foreign land or a question of international significance. What this country needs, as much as Tom Marshall's five cent cigars, is a better knowledge of the rest of the world and what the rest of the world's people are like.

Ignorance is the shriveled fruit of ignorance.

TO AVOID CANCER

Only near-doctors and half-baked journalists think they know a lot about cancer and the cure of cancer. There is no established cure for cancer, and there is no established cause of cancer. Be sure of that. But some things are known. Dr. Elnora Folkmar, of Washington, is doubtless worth listening to when she says cancer predominates in the overfed class, whose diet is relatively rich in starches, fats and proteins. There is much bunk preached about diet, but the fact remains that there would probably be less cancer and more good health if people ate more vegetables, raw fruits, and cereals and less meat.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

By

Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—It has occurred to me that a dislike for any kind of people might easily be cultivated by one who often rides on the subway in New York. It is no idle fiction that the subway trains harbor the most revolting specimens of humanity that one could hope to find. It is not that they are ill-dressed or dirty (although they are often that) or especially repugnant of appearance. They are bad-mannered, it is true, as evidence by the extraordinary impatience which they display in trying to enter a train; but this is not the real reason for disliking them.

The real reason lies in an indefinable atmosphere that surrounds them all. Their faces whether surly, bright, smugly satisfied or cynical convey an impression of decayed minds; of self-centered pigmy-souled people. Why this should be so is beyond me. But I do know, that if I were to let my emotions run wild, I should cherish a virulent dislike for subway riders. They always beat me to a seat.

I was sitting in the men's room at Grand Central when a seedy looking individual began to explore the waste paper basket in front of me. He extracted reams of paper before he found suitable reading matter. This I saw was the book section of the Sunday Times. And he carefully sat himself down, donned a pair of ten-cent store spectacles and proceeded to observe the criticisms of the new books, as set forth by the learned Times critics.

Grand Central is a lonely place at two o'clock in the morning. It would be hard to find more than a score of people in the entire place. An army of negro porters take up the task of squabbling down the marble floors. The vast empty auditorium holds only the sound of swishing mop and the floor clatters and reflects the blue dome above. If one is not careful, he will slip on the wet floor.

A number of establishments in the city are solely devoted to beautifying cats and dogs. And the treatments and services are almost (if not more) numerous than those used on human beings. One of your pets may have a shampoo, a hair cut, a marcel, and other varieties of wave, a pedicure, treatment for skin diseases, for removing parasites and for growing hair.

The last movie in New York for the delicate minded has passed. The Capitol has gone Roxy. Formerly, this was the only theatre in which the all necessary presentation was quiet, seemingly, and in some measure coinciding with the motion pictures presented. Now a full blast organ has been installed; the orchestra, once the pride of the city, has been submerged in a narrow pit, the stage has been outfitted with a moving platform and other popular device and star vaudeville performers and show business have been up the show. In place of the classic overture, we now have the "Capitolians," a jazz orchestra on the stage, whose members can Charleston, sing mammy songs and generally get hot, as the vernacular has it. In place of the elegant and graceful dancing of the Chester Hale girls, we have a group of undressed chorines descending an illuminated stairway. O Tempora, O Mores!

I was dining with friends, and my hostess told me of the incredible stupidity of their janitor. "A really a moron," she said. "A Czech, I think." "Yes," wisecracked her husband, "a blank Czech."

KELLYGRAMS

BUYING POWER OF THE YOUNG

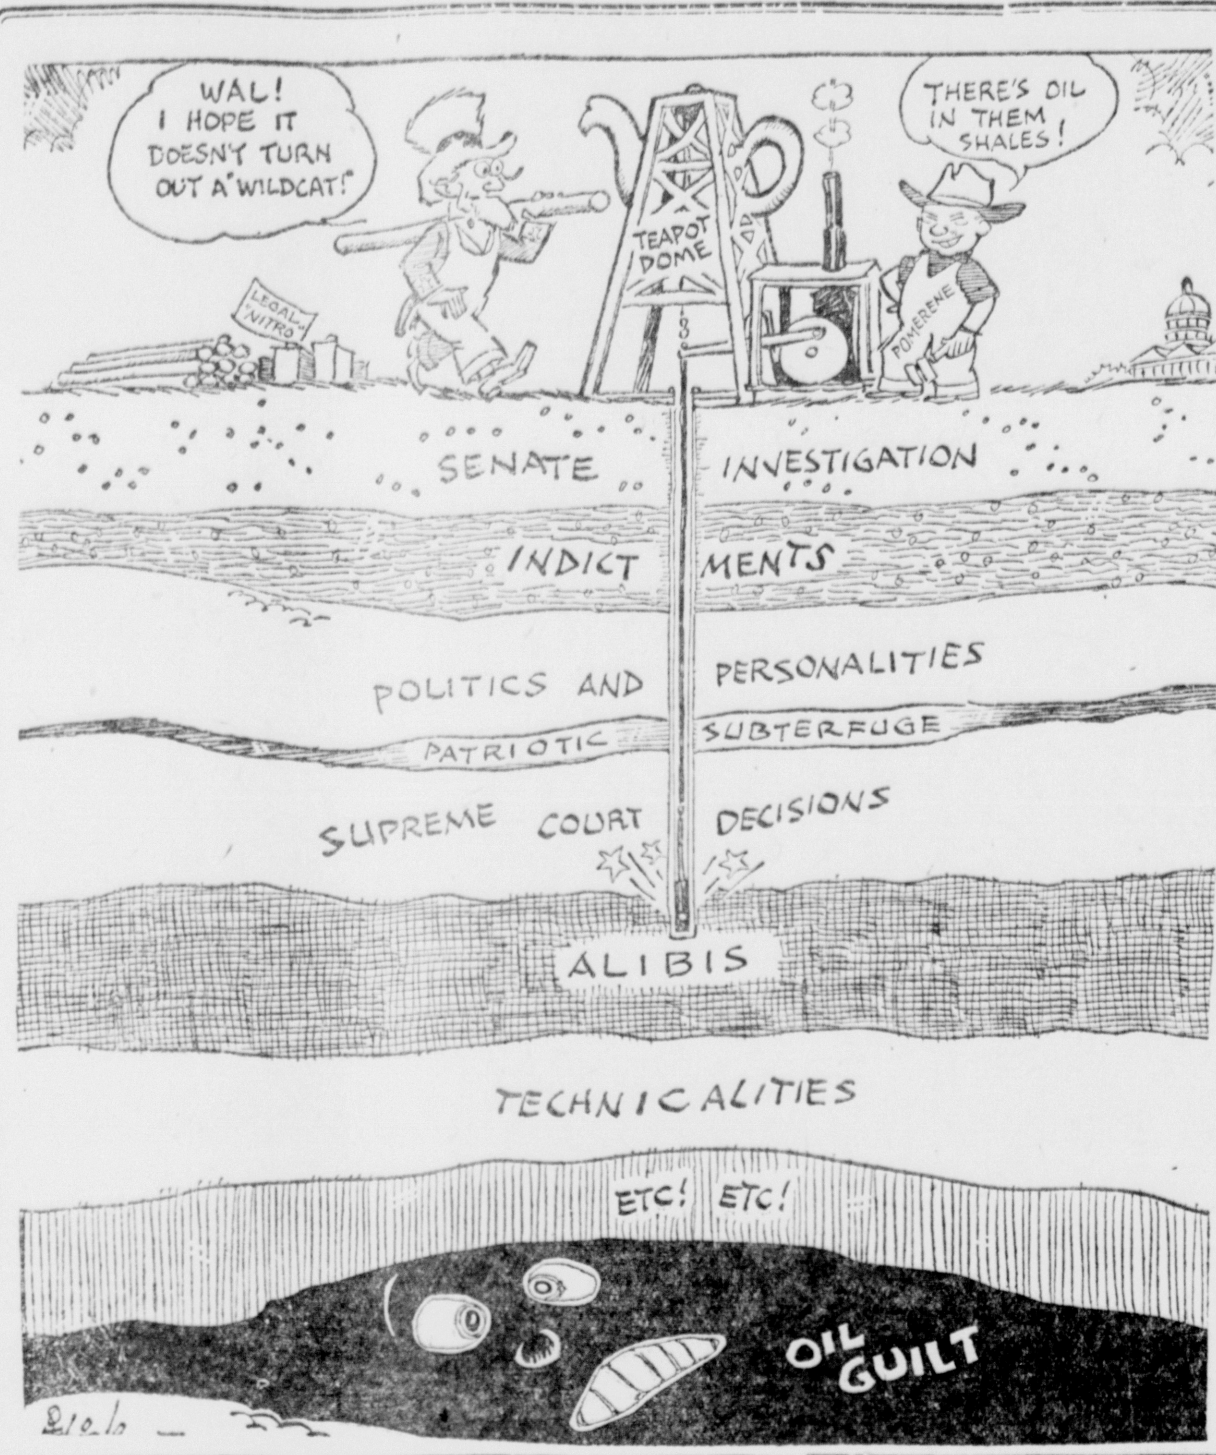

A motion picture magazine conducted an investigation to learn the so-called age factor in retail selling. Their real idea, presumably, was to find out how much influence motion pictures have on sales of clothing and other articles. It is said that the wearing of golf clothes instead of merely one's other suit was greatly increased because of snappy golf outfits seen on films. Likewise, young girls seek to emulate screen beauties in choice of appealing lingerie.

Be that as it may, this investigation showed that by the most important group of buyers are aged between 18 and 30. Even if father is buying a piano or automobile, he is greatly influenced in his choice by those of his family between 18 and 30.

Merchants say that if mother does what her young daughter to buy daughter a dress and they don't agree, they almost invariably compromise on the dress that daughter prefers. Since young people have this influence on buying and also are the most numerous patrons of movie theatres, there is reason to believe that motion pictures probably have more influence on all retail sales than has been suspected.

Perhaps Blanche Mahaffey, a rising young lady of the films, has the strongest of exercises. Almost daily she flits about with a big net on a long stick—chasing butterflies!

DRILLING DEEP

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Parents and Lovers

"All the world loves a lover," they say, the only exception being the girl's parents. The poor girls have a dreadful time with these parents. Sometimes middle-aged people seem to forget that they were once young; sometimes young people fail to realize that married life is long and may be hard for young feet and that possibly mother and father see the pitfalls ahead a little more clearly than they.

The two letters following are from girls who are out of tune with their parents in their love affairs and ask my advice:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: My first question is, 'how old does a girl have to be to be married without her parents' consent?' And also, 'how old does she have to be before she can leave home without the parents' forcing her back?'"

"I have gone with a certain boy for about eight months, and after going with him three months he proposed. I said yes. We did not intend to announce our engagement for awhile until he was better able to support a family. He gave me a watch, and after awhile we moved away. Should I give him the watch back because we won't be able to be married for some time?"

"I intend to make a visit in his home town and do not know what to do. I love him and would wait all the rest of my life if he wanted me to, but I want to know if I am doing right in holding him. He has sworn and shown he loved me and tells everyone there is not another like me. PUZZLED."

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

BRICKBATS

One of the most interesting things about writing your opinions where all may read, is finding out the peculiar reactions that people have in regard to them.

Among the numerous letters that recently came up to me was one that might be of interest to someone besides myself, as showing how easy it is for some people to jump at half-baked conclusions. The screed was from a man who returned to me the little article entitled "Tradition," which I wrote recently. For some unknown reason it seemed the traditional rag to the gentleman.

He seems to think that I voiced my hate against men in that editorial, for he says more or less vehemently, "The enclosed article is the most characteristic spile of the dead-in-the-wood man, later which it has been my misfortune to read."

The wonder is that you find it possible to live an unreasoning and degraded brute as men. In your advent into the world you must, like Horus, have sprung "fulfledged and perfect" from the brain of a god or goddess without any relation to beasts as men."

I much fear that the gentleman has gotten a little mixed up in his ancient mythology in the recent King Tut excitement, for Horus, who was an Egyptian and not a Greek god, did not spring from the brain of either god or goddess. He was the more or less legitimate son of Osiris, king of the dead in the nether world, and Isis, one of the celebrated deities of the Egyptians.

Neither Horus nor any other god or goddess ever sprang "fulfledged and perfect" from the brain of any goddess in all mythology, although it is said that Juno brought forth Vulcan from smelting a tomato.

Minerva, however, was born from the brain of the god Jupiter. So much for the correction of my critic's Greek and Egyptian lore.

I do not hate men, and perhaps, with the exception of my critic, men do not hate me. I have been married to only one husband, who was only divorced from me by death. I have one son who adores his mother and whom his mother adores.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

The more ways we know of serving the old reliable foods the more variety we can put into our meals. You have served tuna fish in a salad and creamed. Have you tried it baked or scalloped? It may be made much like creamed tuna and baked with the potatoes and the pudding, thus using the oven for all the principal dishes of the meal.

Baked Tuna Fish — Baked Potatoes — Pickled Beets — Celery, Carrot, Nut Salad — Graham Date Pudding — Coffee

Today's Recipes

Baked Tuna—Mix a cup of bread crumbs thoroughly with a small can of tuna fish, add a white sauce to cover mixture, place buttered crumbs on top and place in oven. Bake 30 minutes with medium heat.

Graham Date Pudding — Four tablespoons butter, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup sour milk, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one egg, one and one-half cups graham flour, four tablespoons white flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one cup chopped dates and nuts. Cream, butter and sugar and add molasses. Add white flour and mix well. Stir in well beaten egg. Dissolve soda in sour milk and stir into mixture. Add salt and dates and nuts and bake one hour, or until done. This pudding may also be steamed from three to four hours. Serve hot with whipped cream.

A Few Grains of Salt

Rub a little salt on stains on the china. It will remove them. A lump of salt dissolved in the kitchen sink now and then will help keep it sanitary. Sprinkle a little salt on your rugs and carpets before sweeping them.

Shred the Lettuce

When serving salads at a buffet lunch when the guests are not seated at a table, it is wise to shred the lettuce. Then the guests can enjoy the food without inconvenience.

French Fried Carrots

Every fry carrots French fried? Scrape them and slice lengthwise about one-quarter of an inch thick. Boil in small quantity of water until tender. Dip in beaten egg, roll in bread crumbs and fry in butter until brown. Season by frying. Parsnips and sweet potatoes may also be treated in this way.

Tomato Soup

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Wash one-half cup rice, put in two quarts of boiling water and cook very slowly until the starch cells burst and you have a pot of thick starch. Stew a can of tomatoes one-half hour, when put on with salt, a little pepper, one tablespoon sugar, one medium sized onion, sliced, one bay leaf and a little nutmeg. Then strain tomato mixture into rice, adding salt and pepper if necessary. Add one cup whipped cream and serve.

Gloria Swanson, Nathalie Kingston, Marie Prevost, Phyllis Haver, Mabel Normand and Louise Fazenda all got to the high ranks they now hold because they learned early that exercise keeps a star fit.

Behind The Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Just how big a row there was over what General Summerall said, in that speech of his, out west, is a thing we may never know.

Or maybe we shan't know it until years and years and years hence, when somebody gets old and garrulous, and leaks. Or perhaps future historians will dig the real yard out of a lot of ancient archives, in 2027 or thereabouts.

The painful part of it is that the folks who finally got the low-down on it all, if that ever does happen, will be a later generation, which won't care a red cent's worth either way.

It would be a mighty interesting bit of gossip right now.

President Coolidge was hot under the collar when he heard that Summerall had said American soldiers' barracks are worse today than the quarters the Germans kept their prisoners in during the war.

We can set that down as a fact.

Otherwise the general wouldn't have been summoned clear from the Pacific coast, back to Washington, at such a clip that his military aide — an active young man — couldn't keep up with him.

Summerall hadn't said anything else worthy of remark, so the natural conclusion is that that was it.

Let's assume that the general had talked with the president several times concerning the inadequate housing of American troops — and that the president had said yes, he knew, but he had an economy program to think about, too — and that the general had gone away, somewhat disgruntled and made that speech, hereby sticking the president.

And that was that.

Ditto Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

Nevertheless, nobody can tell me, and get away with it, that the president doesn't think these things up in advance.

ident for an extra six million on his calculations for the next fiscal year —

And suppose the president had admitted: "Well, that's a horse on me, but possibly I can play a little of the same game with Mr. Summerall!"

And then suppose that Summerall, after being permitted to travel all the way to Los Angeles, under the impression that he was enjoying a nice, restful trip, had suddenly been summoned 3,000 miles back again, still chewing a mouthful of food, to discuss a budget problem that he's already fully discussed before —

Why, the incident would have a kind of Coolidge-esque humor about it, wouldn't it?

The president is quite given to these little jokes — that aren't exactly jokes.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur once made a speech — that Wilbur once made a speech — that was out on the Pacific coast, too — that it was rumored the president didn't like. The next thing anybody knew Wilbur was on his way back to Washington — and to say that he was hitting only the high places isn't to exaggerate, for he was journeying by plane.

"Gosh!" cried all the Washington correspondents, coming a-running. "Here's where we see a secretary of the navy canned."

Wilbur arrived on the scene and so did the correspondents.

"Well?" inquired the latter.

"What's all this about?"

"What, indeed?" said the president. "I'm sure I don't know."

And that was that.

Ditto Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

Nevertheless, nobody can tell me, and get away with it, that the president doesn't think these things up in advance.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What to Teach a Child About Fundamental Care of the Feet

In every phase of beauty culture, we should apply the motto of "prevention before cure." It is all important to the face, the hair, and it is just as essential to the feet. However, the prevention must be begun at a very early age, we wish to have truly beautiful feet, unscarred by corns, calluses, bunions, s-mis-haps, toe For that reason, I am going to address this talk directly to the mothers, in whose hands lie the future beauty and usefulness of their children's feet.

Chinese mothers used to bind their little girl's feet to make them small and fashionable, truly aristocratic, when they grew into mature women. The poor little things went through all sorts of misery and their mothers to endless trouble to achieve these misshapen little feet. If American mothers gave half as much time to really beneficial care of their children's feet, they could save them much of the pain and embarrassment of later years.

When feet first come into the world they are such lovely bits of workmanship that every one is irresistibly tempted to kiss them. It is the careless way they are treated that makes them the "boobies" of the body. Babies are encouraged to toddle, to walk until they are all ready for it. The little bones must be allowed to grow strong enough to carry the whole body's weight.

The first essential to foot health is absolute cleanliness. Feet must be washed every day, and on hot days two or three times. Little girls should be taught to rinse out their stockings every night so they will always have clean ones to put on in the morning. Toe nails must be cut regularly so that they will not get ingrown. Always cut the toe nails directly across the top and not down into the corners, as the tissue there is a protection to the foot which must not be interfered with.

It is excellent for children to let them go barefooted around the house and yard on warm days. This strengthens the feet and gives them the great benefit of plenty of air. When the feet are always encased in shoes and stockings or under be-clothes, they have no chance to breathe.

Feet should always have their cosmetics, just as the face. When they feel tired and stiff and inelastic, they should be massaged with a good cold cream or cocoa butter, which comes in a cake like soap and is excellent for the feet at all times. A good dusting with bath powder or boric acid powder should always go on the feet before stockings, both to keep them dainty and to prevent any rubbing that might start callouses.

As a last word, I want to warn you to watch your children's feet very closely, and at the first sign of a callous, corn, bunion or aching arches, change the footwear that is causing it. It is never an extravagance to discard shoes which cause harmful pressure on the feet. One year's wrong shoes may develop serious foot troubles that are extremely difficult to get rid of. And once you have had corns on your toes, it is very difficult to keep free from them. My next talk on this theme of foot beauty will be "Exercises to Strengthen and Beautify Your Feet."

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

Bread and Milk or Crickets and Cockroaches?

"Te-hee! What's the sense in asking 'Who goes there?' You mean 'Who comes here?' giggled the squeaky voice, as the clumsy form at Peter's feet wobbled a step nearer. "You know, I am walking straight toward, not away from you, Boy, or you wouldn't have stepped backward, as you did just then. Your mistaking me for Batty proves that though you may be bright enough as Two-Legs go, you are a bit stupid when it comes to the ways of the night roomers. So, now, if ever, does a Bat care to make friends with a perfect stranger, and when he does he expects to be treated like a gentleman. When he meets any one who is impolite enough to slap at him or to try to catch him by his foot he makes circles about his head just to tease his tormentor, and then off he flies and never comes back."

The Boy fairly gasped. "I didn't slap at Bat, and certainly you can guess by my size that I didn't try to catch him!"

"Well, you didn't listen when he spoke to you, and that was almost as bad. You may as well make up your mind to forget him. Batty will never have anything more to do with you were you to offer him the sweetest of milk or bread or sugar."

The squeaky voice was quite decided. "Bread and milk and sugar!" repeated Peter, and forgot all the rest the stranger had said in his interest in the last few words. "Do Bats like the same foods we Two-Legs do?"

"Well, rather!" squeaked the stranger, and giggled again. "The only trouble is that Bats have to steal such fare from under the noses of the Two-Legs, and though Bats are very clever, that is not such an easy job as you may think. Of course, if the creatures let themselves be captured by the Two-Legs and shut up in cages or tucked inside stuffy boxes, they may live on such delicacies to the end of their days, for the Two-Legs are not stingy when it comes to food, whatever their other faults may be. But what Bat wants to be a captive? He would rather be free to flap through the night, even if he does have to hunt hard for his dinner of gnats and grasshoppers and crickets and roaches."

Xenia Central Meets Wilmington Thursday

EIGHTEENTH SET TO FIND LOCALS WITH ONE-GAME MARGIN

Kolb's Gridders Reign Favorites In Tilt With Quakers

The Blue and White-jerseyed gridders of Central High School came through the Withrow struggle last week in good physical condition and began preparations Monday for the annual encounter with Wilmington High at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Thursday afternoon.

Thursday's contest will be the eighteenth meeting between the two schools on the gridiron since 1911. No games were played in 1913, 1919 and 1922.

During this period Xenia has the edge in the matter of victories, having won eight games and lost seven. Two contests resulted in a tie score. The Quaker school, however, has collected more points than Xenia, scoring 217 points to 203 for Xenia.

The Blue and White, providing the same form is displayed Thursday as was exhibited in the Withrow contest, will reign a favorite to win the 1927 tussle.

Wilmington's record on the gridiron so far this season has been nothing to brag about, but the Quaker outfit points for its yearly game with Xenia and has an unhappy faculty of rising to great heights in this contest.

Wilmington's 1927 record suffers by comparison with Xenia. Central High has won two games, lost two and tied two this year, scoring fifty-nine points to opponents' sixty-two. Wilmington has played four games in the South Central League and is close to last place, having won one game, lost three and scored twenty-six points against opponents' forty-nine.

The record of Xenia-Wilmington grid meetings since 1911 follows:

1911	Xenia 15, Wilmington 3.
1912	Xenia 25, Wilmington 0.
1913	No game.
1914	Xenia 6, Wilmington 0.
1915	Xenia 27, Wilmington 7.
1916	Xenia 20, Wilmington 20.
1917	Xenia 6, Wilmington 35.
1918	Xenia 30, Wilmington 0.
1919	No game.
1920	Xenia 7, Wilmington 20.
1921	Xenia 19, Wilmington 7.
1922	No game.
1923	Xenia 0, Wilmington 31.
1924	Xenia 0, Wilmington 6.
1925	Xenia 0, Wilmington 7.
1926	Xenia 7, Wilmington 0.

XENIAN IS WINNER OF MASQUE PRIZE

Mrs. Irma Free, Xenia, was chosen the best costumed woman and her sister, Mrs. Florence Kearney, this city, won the second woman's prize, at the Halloween celebration at Cedarville, Monday night. Mrs. Free was also winner of the third costume prize at the Xenia Halloween celebration, Saturday night, instead of Miss Freeman, as previously announced.

Several hundred revelers took part in the masquerade at Cedarville. A parade of the masqueraders was staged, and prizes awarded for various types of costumes. A dance was held in one of the lodge halls of the city, at the close of the celebration.

RED CROSS PLANS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Officers of Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, are making arrangements for the eleventh annual roll call November 11-24. A county-wide organization is being effected and plans are being outlined to acquaint Greene Countyans with the work of the Red Cross, both locally, nationally and throughout the world.

This year's Roll Call assumes exceptional interest because of the extraordinary burden placed on the Red Cross by the Mississippi flood. It met the emergency so splendidly as to deserve the gratitude of the nation. Its continuing responsibility for dealing with the after-effects of the flood gives it a special claim on America's generous support at this time.

Prominent men, in various walks of endeavor, are urging support of the 1927 Roll Call.

PROSECUTOR TALKS FOR MARSHALL BILL AT YELLOW SPRINGS

The Marshall bill, restoring power formerly held by justices of the peace, constables and village mayors, was the subject of an address by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall before an open meeting in the Yellow Springs M. E. Church Sunday night.

The speaker quoted ex-Common Pleas Judge, David F. Prugh, of Columbus, as follows:

"I challenge Attorney General Edward C. Turner to point out a sentence, phrase or word of the Marshall bill that requires either a mayor or justice of the peace to convict the defendant before he can receive his fees, or that makes them partisan judges in the sense of the Taft decision. It cannot be done."

"The Marshall bill was drawn to remedy the very defects in our law, at which, later, the Taft decision was aimed," Marshall said.

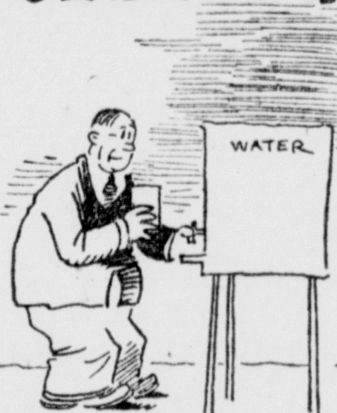

Following arguments in favor of the bill, he said: "No one can know whether it will be declared constitutional or unconstitutional. It's constitutionality cannot be settled by the people and it is not in issue before the people for a court alone can rule on its constitutionality."

"Last year," he said, "$1,200,000 was collected from bootleggers in Ohio. Defeat of the bill means more taxes to meet the loss in fines, while, on the other hand, the upholding of the bill will mean a profit to taxpayers."

Answering a charge that the bill tends to bring about unwarranted arrests, the speaker pointed out the bill "safeguards against that very thing, for it provides the magistrate cannot collect his fees until his cost bill is checked by the prosecuting attorney or attorney general; and if the prosecutors in the various counties are on the job, there can be no unwarranted arrests."

He was introduced by the Rev. T. M. Scarff. The Rev. Carl White and the Rev. Mr. Patton led the devotions opening the meeting.

BOWLING

Fords lost ground in the Recreation League race by dropping two out of three games to the last-place Quakers in the last half of a double-header Sunday night. The leaders, however, were not hurt and were lucky to win the last game, by a margin of ten pins to escape a white-washing. Quakers rolled in improved form. Cox laid in a strike while Wilmington made seven pins and the Studebakers won the tussle. McCarran led the winners with 562 while L. Regan had a similar total for the losers. Box score:

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips."

Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

The Theater

Because of her performance as Lorelei Lee, the gold-digger in the picture version of Anita Loos' book, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Ruth Taylor has been awarded a long term contract with Paramount. Unknown a few weeks ago, she had made so great an impression that the executives at the Paramount studio predict a marvelous future for her.

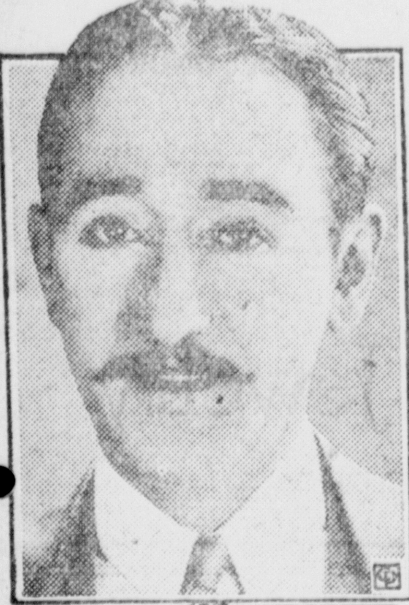

Prior to her selection for the leading role in the picture, Miss Taylor was associated with Pathe comedies as a bathing beauty. Coincident with the announcement by Paramount that it had purchased the screen rights of the Anita Loos best seller, came the declaration from Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount production head, that he would ing, Constance Talmadge thinks the greatest comedy role of her life is in "Breakfast at Sunrise" showing at the Bijou Tuesday and Wednesday. Miss Talmadge does one of the most entertaining impersonations of her entire career as a Parisian belle who embarks on a strange matrimonial venture. Opposite her in the cast are Don Alvarado, Bryant Washburn, Paullette Duval, Alice White, Marie Dressler, Burr McIntosh, David Mir, Albert Gran and Nelli Bly Baker.

Ruth Roland, admits that if her California real estate holdings were to be liquidated, her profits would be in the neighborhood of $2,500,000 says "Photoplay."

BROOM SUPPLANTS PIN

CLEVELAND, O.—According to Cleveland judges who handle many divorce cases daily the broom has supplanted the rolling pin as a domestic weapon. Plates and rolling pins are still used to chastize hubby when he lingers too long at lodge with the boys, but the broom is mentioned in by far the largest number of divorce suits.

Adolph Menjou, film star, now is absolutely free. While in a hospital, where physicians said he would remain about two weeks, Menjou received word that a Los Angeles court had granted Mrs. Kathryn Menjou her final decree of divorce. They were married in New York in 1920 and separated Nov. 8, 1925.

search the world over, if necessary, for a girl who in the opinion of judges comprehended those qualities in real life that had made the character of Miss Loos' story so famous. Hundreds of applicants were interviewed and Miss Taylor was elected.

Norma Talmadge's faith in "Camille" which the star produced against much well-meaning advice, has been more than justified. Germany reports the modernized version of the famous love story is a sensational success in Berlin.

LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only child of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived far beyond their means. Lily has been reared to be thoroughly useless, and her highest ambition is realized when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a wealthy bachelor much older than herself.

On the morning after he asks her to marry him, he telephones to say he is coming to see her at five that afternoon, and Lily's mother asks him to stay for dinner. Lily begins to look ahead and to wonder what life will be like if she had to eat dinner with Staley every night for years. She likes him, and the thought of his money is more than a pleasant thought to her. But she wonders if he really loves her enough to marry her. Then MRS. LEXINGTON starts talking about the June wedding and the lace veil and the decorations, and in spite of herself, Lily shrills to the thought of a big wedding. She starts out in the rain to ask her cousin, SUE CAIN, to be her maid of honor. She is having lunch down town, and on her way there Lily sees a very handsome, blue-eyed man looking at her. She feels herself oddly attracted toward him before she notices that he is wearing a driver's uniform and standing beside a taxicab. She starts away from him, then turns, and goes slowly back to him.

CHAPTER II

Long afterwards Lily knew exactly why she turned in the street and went back to the orange-colored taxicab and its driver.

But that afternoon she had no idea why she was doing it. She simply did it—moved by some impulse that pulled her back as if she had been a marionette jerked this way and that by slender threads.

With her eyes on the driver's face, she opened the door of the cab and climbed nimbly into it. She dropped down upon the leather cushions.

"Where do you want to go, Miss?" the man asked, and instantly Lily liked the sound of his voice. It was low and deep. It was the nicest voice she had ever heard. She felt as if she had been waiting to hear that voice for ever so long—for years and years. It soothed her, and it excited her, too. It stirred her.

She was more excited at that moment than she ever had been before in her life that had been filled with excitement of all kinds. "Where do I want to go?" she repeated. "Why—where do I want to go?"

As a matter of fact, she did not want to go anywhere, except to the Park Lane restaurant that was not 30 yards away. She had come down town to see Sue Cain, and here she was!

"I want to go home," she decided. "Montpelier road. You know where it is?" It was far out beyond the city limits, and Lily was grateful for the long ride ahead of her.

The cab jerked and started. Lily leaned back against the cushions and studied the back of the driver's head—a very well-shaven head, with its ears pressed flat against it under the stiff-visored cap.

Then suddenly she sat forward in her seat. Just above the "jump seats" was a small pasteboard card, and upon it was the driver's photograph. Above it was this legend: "MERCURY TAXI COMPANY Owner-driver Cabs."

"Pat France—What a lovely name!" said Lily to herself. "Pat France!" She liked it immensely. It had such a gay, nonchalant, cheerful sound. "Pat France..."

She turned down one of the jump seats and pushed open the window behind the driver. If he heard her or saw her, he gave no sign. He looked straight ahead of him at the wet street, crowded with automobiles and people and street cars.

"Your car skids on a day like this doesn't it?" she asked presently.

"Yes." He did not turn his head.

"I drive my father's car a great deal—and I hate to be out in weather like this," Lily said, after a long pause.

No answer.

"I should think it would be an exciting life—driving a taxicab," was the next thing she said, her eyes on the man's face.

"What a nice nose he has," she was thinking, as she spoke. She liked the firm way his lips came together, too, and the way his black brows jutted out a little over those blue eyes.

Over taxidiving was an exciting life, Patrick France did not say so. He smiled in an indifferent sort of way and stepped on the gas.

"I suppose he's used to girls taking this thing that I'm doing," thought Lily. "He's good looking, and women always talk to good-looking cab drivers and policemen in all probability."

She closed the window, and went back to the corner of back seat. Her eyes dropped once more to the photograph of Pat France, behind his ising-glass shield.

What a nice, clever look he had, she thought, leaning forward to study it more closely. Straight, honest eyes, a wide, humorous mouth, and the kind of nose that belongs to a man who does things.

Then she noticed how white his collar was above the khaki-colored coat, and how clean his big hands were as they lay on the steering wheel. He certainly was more than good to look at.

Suddenly the car jerked, sputtered, and came to a slow sliding stop in the wide, wet street where they were passing through. The driver leaned forward, listening intently to the despairing sound it made as it came to a halt. Then he jumped out and threw up the orange-colored hood, all glowing and spotted with the rain. He began to fuss with the motor, his lips puckered up in a cheerful whistle.

Presently he stopped, whistling and began to hum the tune of the "Cherie," waltz which happened to be popular everywhere at that time.

Lily moved over to the "jump seat" once more. "Well, you certainly are a good driver."

As a matter of fact, she did not want to go anywhere, except to the Park Lane restaurant that was not 30 yards away. She had come down town to see Sue Cain, and here she was!

Then she noticed how white his collar was above the khaki-colored coat, and how clean his big hands were as they lay on the steering wheel. He certainly was more than good to look at.

what was the matter with it, didn't you?" she asked, sociably. "The engine of a car is a complete mystery to me. Do you like to tinker with them?"

He nodded, and seemed to fairly light up. "Do I? You bet I do! An automobile engine is the most interesting thing on earth to me."

"I like a car the way—the way Charlie Chaplin likes the movies," Lily laughed. "You're an expert, then?" she asked, chaffing him.

To her surprise the driver nodded his head vigorously. "Always been crazy about cars," he said. "Ever since I was a kid, and had a red tin auto that wound up with a key—I'm working on an invention of my own right now. It's a whiz!"

His blue eyes flashed with eagerness for an instant. Then Lily, watching his face in the windshield mirror, saw him frown.

He lapsed into a grim kind of silence as if he had made up his mind he was talking too much.

"What is your invention?" he asked.

But if he heard her, he gave no sign of it. He never said another word all the rest of the way to the big Lexington house far out on Montpelier road.

As he swung the cab into the gravel driveway, Lily did a thing that she would not have believed herself capable of doing an hour before.

She put out her hands, in their satin kid gloves, and slipped the card from his ising-glass pocket—the card with the name "Patrick

France" and his photograph upon it!

She had just time to slip it into her hand bag when he opened the door and handed her the fare slip. She did not tip him, as she certainly would have tipped any other cab driver in Christendom. She had feeling, somehow, that he wouldn't take a tip from a woman.

And when the orange-colored cab backed out of the drive and started back to town, she stood watching it from the top of the stone steps and wrote its number "157"—on a page in her little gold-leafed address book.

Late that afternoon Staley Drummond came to see his bride-to-be.

In his eagerness he came at four instead of five, and he came bearing gifts. He brought Lily a box of white orchids, delicately marked with color. He brought her a five-pound box of candy and glazed fruits. He brought her five new novels, and a box of silk-tipped cigarettes.

Mrs. Lexington met him in the hall and gave him a motherly kiss, although she couldn't have been more than ten years older than he.

"There's no one Cyrus and I would rather welcome into our family than you, Staley," she said warmly—so warmly that if Lily's welcome was a little cold he did not notice it.

She came downstairs, pale and bright eyed in a black satin dress that was a perfect background for Staley's white orchid. But after dinner she took them off and put them in a bowl of water. They were too lovely to wear, she said.

"I bought them," Staley said, holding her in his arms and kissing her tenderly as if she were some frail bit of statuary that would break in his arms if he held her too tight or kissed her too hard.

They sat down on the big deep couch before the fire and he held her hand—the hand that wore his ring like a glistening tear-drop—in both of his. He told her how she had made every dream of women that he had ever had come true.

Lily nodded without enthusiasm. Somehow or other, it didn't sound so alluring—sitting before the fire in Staley's big beautiful house—with only Staley for company. Staley belonged in a crowd, laughing and talking, cracking jokes, lighting cigarettes, playing cards, dancing as no other man could dance.

"What's the matter with you tonight? You don't seem happy," he said to her now. "Are you sorry you've promised you'll marry me in June? Is that what's wrong?"

"Silly!" said Lily, and smiled into his eyes. She flicked the end of his nose with one playful finger. "Silly Stilly!"

He took her in his arms again and looked straight at her. "You do care for me, don't you, Lily?"

She laughed again, but this time she didn't meet his eyes. "I've been wanting you to ask me to marry you for months and months," she said.

That was the truth, at any rate. She had wanted him to—just as prayerfully as her mother had wanted him to.

She had wanted to be Mrs. Staley Drummond. She still wanted to be!

But as she sat there, with his arms around her, looking up at him from under her thick, curving lashes, she was thinking about a cab driver who was working on some kind of an invention for automobiles.

"Lily, there's a cab driver out here on the porch. He says he must see you about something," she said. "I can't get rid of him."

"Silly!" said Lily, and smiled into his eyes. She flicked the end
